Arlington Hts. Rd. slated for county upgrade

The Cook County Highway Dept. has announced plans to improve a mile-long stretch of Arlington Heights Road from Dundee to Lake-Cook roads.

Scheduling of the highway work has been awaited by the villages of Arlington Heights and Buffalo Grove. Both villages have incorporated property along the street.

Plans call for widening the street from two to four lanes plus construction of mountable concrete medians varying in width from four to 16 feet. Curbs, gutters and street storm sewers are also planned improvements.

The Arlington Heights Village Board was notified of the planned improvement this week.

THE COUNTY asked village officials to review the highway plans and, if they approve them, to endorse the improvement project.

L. A. Hanson, Arlington Heights village manager, said the village engineering department has no objections to the county's plan and he is recommending that the village board support the project.

Glenn Frederichs, Cook County assistant superintendent of highways, Thursday said the reconstruction of north Arlington Heights Road will start after Lake-Cook Road is improved between Milwaukee Avenue and Arlington Heights Road.

He estimated the Arlington Heights Road work will begin in five years.

"It takes us time to prepare plans and acquire right-of-way," Frederichs said. "Five years is generally the right lead time."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS plans to widen Arlington Heights Road between Rand Road and University Drive in conjunction with an Arlington Heights Road underpass at Northwest Highway.

The widening will eliminate a serious two-lane bottleneck between four-lane stretches of Arlington Heights Road and will leave only the Dundee to Lake-Cook roads segment for improvement.

Frederichs said it was too early to estimate the cost or construction time of the Dundee to Lake-Cook project. The Rand Road to University Drive widening, a stretch of road about a quarter mile longer than Dundee to Lake-Cook, is estimated to cost $1.5 million.

Seminar to note new programs for gifted kids

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 is offering a series of seminars for parents this month on the identification and development of programs for gifted students.

The district has received state funding to plan programs for pupils identified as exceptionally talented in creativity, intelligence, leadership, visual or the performing arts and athletics.

The seminars, which will be at Elk Grove High School, 500 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village, are an initial step to set up programs for gifted students in the district.

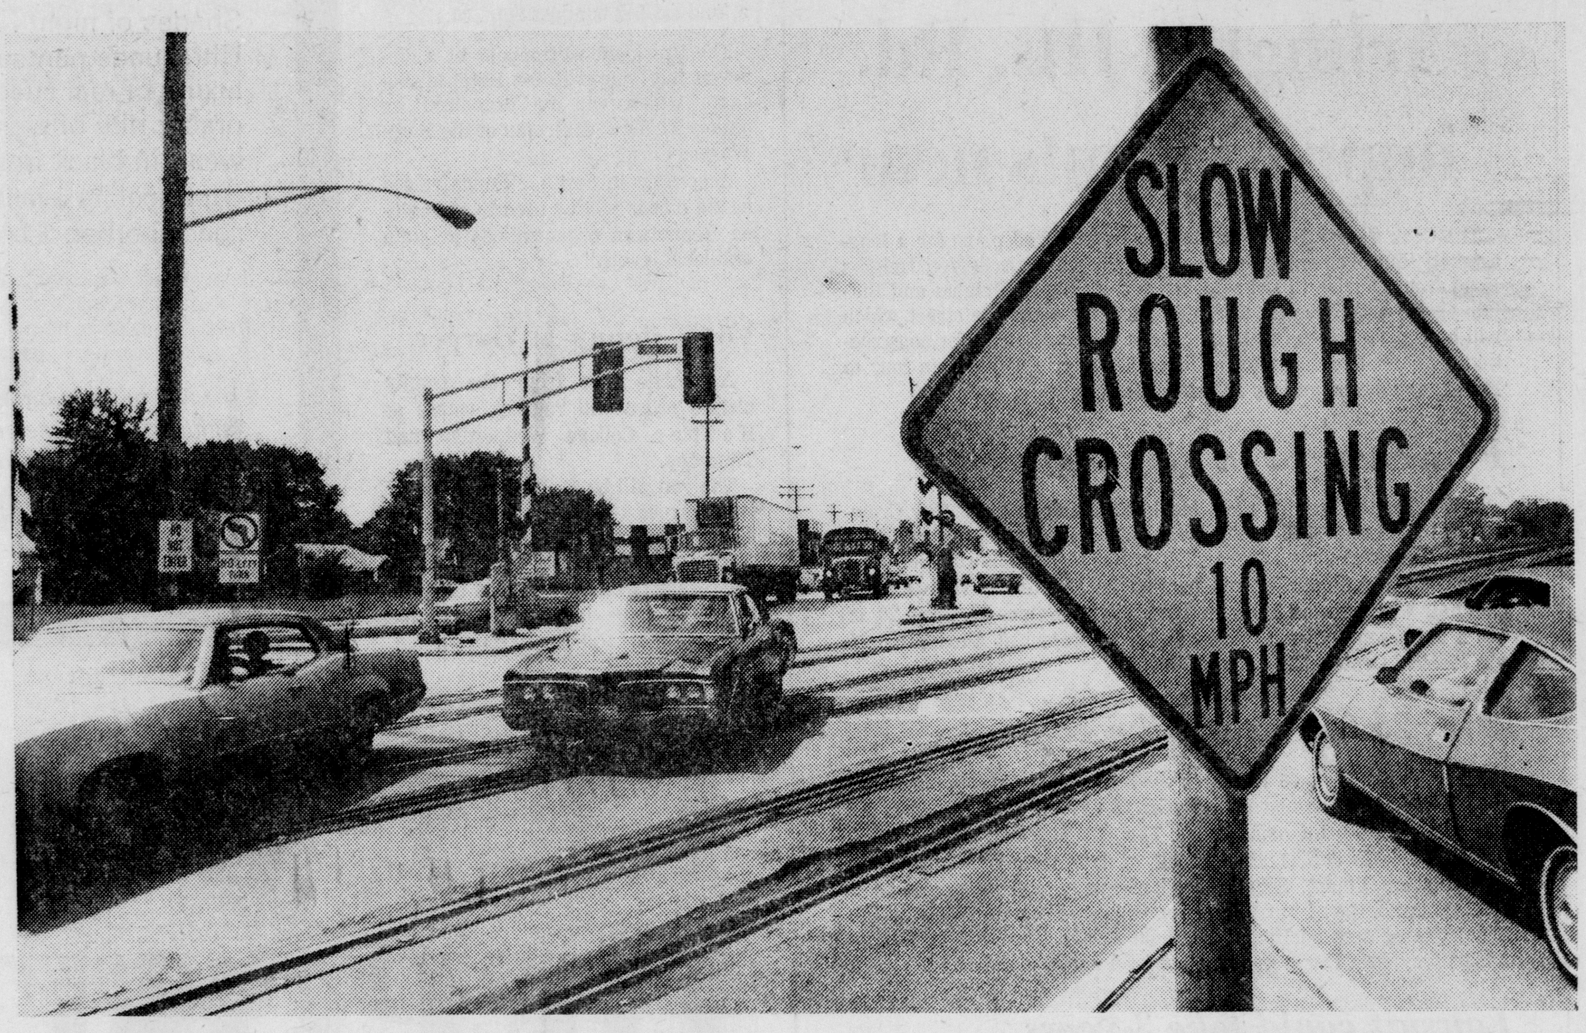

A program on leadership development will be conducted by Bill Stepien, gifted training coordinator in Dundee Unit Dist. 300, at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Intellectual giftedness will be discussed by Mary Lu Muffoletto, director of gifted programming in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, at 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 11.

A program on creativity will be presented by Marilynn Meisner, Northwest Suburban Area Service Center director for gifted children, at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 17.

Don Nylin, director of elementary education and gifted programs in Aurora Dist. 129, will discuss "Meeting the Needs of the Talented" at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Parents interested in attending one of the seminars should call their school principal Monday.

CHICAGO AND North Western Ry. officials are expected to inspect track and roadbed conditions at Nortwest Highway and Central Road Friday. Road conditions are so rough at the crossing that warning signs were installed there.

New encephalitis case reported

by KAREN BLECHA

Another suspected case of encephalitis was reported in the Northwest suburbs Thursday as the total number of confirmed, suspected and probably cases rose to 86 in Cook County.

A 56-year-old Mount Prospect man was listed in good condition at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights where he is being tested for the disease. A spokesman said the man, whom hospital officials would not name, was admitted to the hospital Wednesday "with a fever of undetermined origin."

A 36-year-old Schaumburg man suspected to have the disease was still in serious condition Thursday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

HOSPITAL OFFICIALS said the man, in a comma in the intensive care unit of the hospital, was admitted Friday for other medical reasons. They said he is being tested for encephalitis but refused to comment further on the case.

A 29-year-old Bolingbrook man, also suspected of having the disease, was released from Alexian Brothers Thursday after tests showed he did not have encephalitis. He is the second case in Illinois to be removed from the suspected and probable list since the epidemic began.

The Illinois Dept. of Public Health reported 22 new cases of the disease in the state Thursday, bringing the total to 129. Thirteen of the new cases were reported in Cook County.

A 27-year-old La Grange woman was added to the confirmed list while four new probable cases were reported in Chicago, Palos Heights, and Evergreen Park. Eight new suspected cases were hospitalized in Chicago, Palos Heights and Berwyn. One suspected case was reported in Hinsdale.

STATE HEALTH officials said it was impossible to tell if the disease has peaked or if Cook County can expect more new cases. The officials, along with a team of specialists from the Center for Disease Control in Colorado, will begin collecting and classifying birds and mosquitos in an attempt to locate the disease source. Encephalitis is transmitted from birds to human beings by the insects.

Wilbur Mitchell, head of the Northwest Mosquito Abatement District, said crews are starting their second round of mosquito spraying in the Northwest suburbs. He said crews would spray the Schaumburg area again Thursday night since the 36-year-old Schaumburg man suspected to have the disease may have been bitten there.

Schaumburg health department officials said they would work with hospital officials to determine if the man may have contracted the disease in Schaumburg.

Larry Eiles, health services director in Mount Prospect, said ponds and open bodies of water in the village have been checked and "nothing has been found out of the ordinary."

Symptoms of the disease include headache, high fever, and disorientation and eventually a coma. Most victims recover spontaneously but the disease can result in brain damage and death.

Shah of Iran manipulates world pistachio trade, cuts supply to ice cream connoisseurs here

by JOE SWICKARD

Tell old Shah, "Let my pistachios go."

If you're wondering what has happened to pistachios and pistachio ice cream recently, you can add them to the ever growing list of items and products in short supply on the world market. Shortages, whether natural or induced, also mean a rise in prices — for oil or pistachios.

"Sure the price for pistachios is sky high, but there's no shortage. In fact, there was a record crop but the Shah of Iran kept them all over there just like oil," said a spokesman for the Midwest Nut and Seed Co.

A SPOKESMAN for the marketing division of Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co. said the Shah "made so much money on his oil that he held them off the market."

Both men said the Shah, rather than have his farmers take a beating on a flooded market, purchased about half the crop. The nuts, rich in protein, were used in free lunch programs for Iranian school children and to supplement the diet of the Army.

While students and soldiers were munching on the tasty nuts, American ice cream addicts were starting to suffer.

Bresler Ice Cream Co., operators of the 33 Flavor Shops, found the cost of the nuts "prohibitive."

NIPC seeks equal share of RTA funds for suburbs

by STEVE FORSYTH

Chicago suburbs will get help in claiming an equal share of federal subsidies for mass transportation if a Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission staff recommendation is approved next week.

The NIPC staff has reviewed a request by the Regional Transportation Authority for $50.5 million in federal operating subsidies and will recommend approval at a meeting Wednesday with the requirement that distribution of the money be equitable to all areas.

The NIPC review will be sent to Washington, D.C., with attached copies of all comments from municipalities in the six-county RTA area. Most of the 257 communities have given no response, but 10 have filed negative statements and five have submitted conditional approval statements.

THE NIPC STAFF has recommended that the RTA be required to notify NIPC of all disbursements so fairness can be monitored. The recommendation reflects the opinions of the suburbs objecting to the grant.

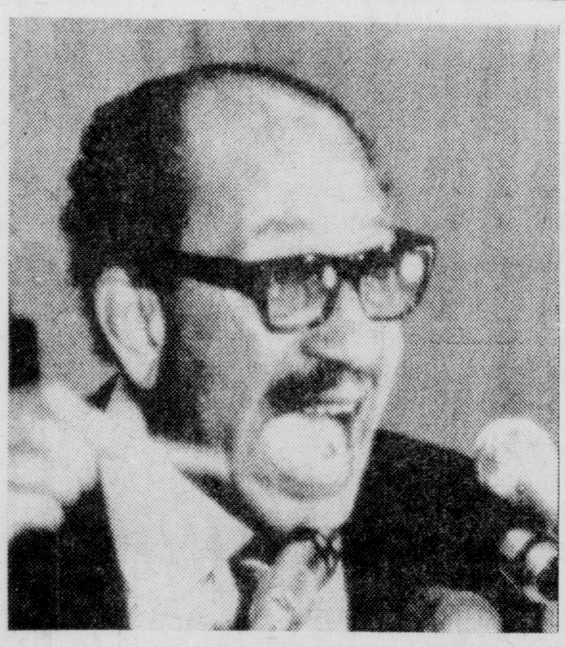

The Bi-State Commission, which reviews federal grant applications that affect the six metropolitan Chicago counties and two northwest Indiana counties, is expected to approve the grant under the same conditions, a NIPC spokesman said.

Wheeling Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon is one of 10 officials objecting to the grant under the terms of the application.

In a letter to NIPC, Scanlon said, "The RTA has blatantly discriminated against the suburbs by funding the Chicago Transit Authority bus system 100 per cent while funding suburban transit systems less than 100 per cent. We feel a more equitable formula for both suburban systems and the Chicago system should be implemented to eliminate this discriminatory practice."

Hoffman Estates and Des Plaines have filed conditional approval statements. Des Plaines Mayor Herbert Behrel said he hopes a more favorable distribution of funds is set up in the future. "The suburbs were assured of better funding processes than is apparent now," Behrel wrote.

Village Pres. Virginia Hayter, Hoffman Estates, said comment was impossible without further details.

Settlement for teachers enters final negotiations

Teachers and board members in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 "are just an eyelash away" from final settlement of the 1975-76 teacher contract, Hugh Brady, a union negotiator, said Thursday.

Union and board negotiating teams met Wednesday, the first time both sides have met since the board declared an impasse in talks Aug. 25. The impasse was declared because teachers refused the board's offer of a 10 per cent increase in salary and fringe benefits. Teachers said they wanted a minimum 15 per cent increase in the financial package.

But the Dist. 21 school board instructed its negotiating team last week to continue contract talks. Teachers gave their team similar instructions when they met the day before they reported to the schools.

"We got together and didn't do anything formally, but I think we're an eyelash away from a settlement," Brady said.

"WE'RE GOING to begin again Friday (today). We think we can work out our differences," said John Barger, Dist. 21 associate superintendent and spokesman for the board negotiating team.

Both sides said that since they are working together again, no mediator will be called in.

The two teams will meet informally today, but a full formal session will be held Monday.

"I think we're on the verge of settling," Brady said. But he declined to list issues which are still unsettled.

The Cook County Highway Dept. has announced plans for a long-awaited improvement of a mile-long stretch of Arlington Heights Road from Dundee to Lake-Cook roads. Pair charged in kidnaping

Two Arlington Heights men, Mark W. Beatty, 24, and Guy Crawford, 18, both of 2165 S. Tonne Dr., Apt. 106, have been charged with aggravated kidnaping, aggravated battery and unlawful restraint after allegedly kidnaping and beating an Elk Grove Village man. The pair was arrested Thursday. The victim, James W. Case, 20, of 938 A Jefferson Sq., was released after treatment at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village.

Dist. 26 faces tax hike vote

River Trails Dist. 26 residents may be asked to approve a tax rate hike before the end of the year to save the district from an increasingly grim financial future. The 1975-76 school year will end with a $166,000 deficit as a result of less state aid because of declining enrollment. School board members will be presented a referendum proposal in two months, which will summarize why the district must seek additional tax dollars from its residents or face bankruptcy, said Ralph Beaudoin, district business manager.

Lawsuit could take 3 years

Former Village Atty. Paul Hamer's lawsuit against the Village of Wheeling could be tied up in court up to three years because of a backlog of cases on the docket. Hamer was fired by the village board in July, even though he had a contract with the village which was to run through June 30, 1976. Officials have challenged the validity of the contract, because it was not approved by the village board. Hamer is seeking $21,000, his yearly salary. The suit was served on the village last week.

Ford sets state visit for GOP

President Gerald R. Ford will visit Chicago late this month to help raise funds for Illinois candidates in the 1976 elections.

Harold Smith Jr. of Barrington, a state Republican central committeeman, received confirmation from the state house late Wednesday night that the President had accepted an invitation from the Illinois Republican Finance Committee to appear at a fund-raising banquet Sept. 30.

The President will appear at a dinner at the Conrad Hilton Hotel in Chicago, which will be organized by James F. Bere, chairman of the Borg-Warner Corp.

According to Smith, "Funds raised at the dinner will be used to strengthen Republican organizations at state and local levels."

Voter signup at Harper

A mobile van from the county clerk's office will register voters at Harper College Wednesday and Thursday.

The van will be at the college center lounge from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. both days.

Harper students as well as other local residents can register at the van. Harper College is at Algonquin and Roselle roads, Palatine.

Louisville busing ignites police-protester clash

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)) — Nearly 1,000 antibusing demonstrators clashed with police Thursday at the start of the nation's largest new court-ordered desegregation busing program. There was little trouble at the schools, but attendance was off by about 50 per cent.

Thriteen persons, one of them a woman, were arrested following street fighting between police and demonstrators in the downtown area and in another incident at a predominantly white high school. Officials said four policemen and two protesters suffered minor injuries.

Charges against those arrested ranged from unlawful assembly and disorderly conduct to harassment and assaulting a police officer.

The only violence at a school in the Louisville-Jefferson County School System, which was ordered desegregated last July, was a rock throwing incident at suburban Fairdale in which one man was arrested. Officials said demonstrators attempted to block buses from returning black students to their home schools.

The busing involves 22,600 of the school system's 130,000 students.

Five bomb threats were reported at five different schools, all in predominantly white areas. But police and U.S. marshals found nothing when they investigated.

The 50 per cent drop off in school attendance was caused mostly by antibusing groups who boycotted the schools.

The protesters, shouting, "We want freedom," fought with police at a downtown shopping mall where five persons were arrested and later outside the main post office where four more were taken into custody.

U.S. District Judge James Gordon, the man who penned the busing order, had ruled that protest crowds in the downtown area could number no more than 100.

"We allowed leniency as far as the demonstration because we understood the feelings of the public," Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane said. "Our two main concerns were to prevent the demonstrators from blocking traffic and demonstrating on the River City Mall."

Sloane said about 350 of the city's 790 member force was used in quelling the disturbances.

The first day of court-ordered desegregation was met with much confusion, though school officials said it was "nearly typical" of previous initial school days. Some school buses failed to appear at their designated areas, others did not show up at all and some went to the wrong schools.

At one predominantly white school, only 22 of 300 students to be bussed showed up to catch the five buses dispatched to transport them.

AN ANTI-BUSING demonstrator is subdued by Louisville, Ky. police following clash in a street intersection during the first day of court ordered busing. Nearly 1,000 demonstrated.

Sadat blasts Soviet 'rumor mongers'

CAIRO (UPI) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, facing mounting opposition to his interim peace accord with Israel, angrily lashed out at the Soviet Union Thursday, accusing it of trying to foil a negotiated settlement of the Middle East conflict.

In a televised one-hour speech far more critical of the Soviets than ever before, Sadat called Soviet leaders "seditious rumor mongers," who he said were aiming at "blowing up the Arab situation."

Sadat went before a joint session of Parliament and the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only legal political party, to defend the three-year interim peace accord with Israel less than a hour after representatives from both sides signed it in Geneva.

He praised President Ford whose "personal intervention and attention had a great effect in realizing the accord," he said. The audience applauded when he called Ford "a man who kept his work and promises despite the difficult domestic circumstances he is facing."

"I consider that the Soviet union, by virtue of the stand it took today (boycotting the signing ceremony) was flagrantly instigating and attempting to undermine the unity of the Arabs," Sadat said.

Parliament went in to session after Sadat's speech and unanimously endorsed his negotiating policies and the interim Sinai accord.

He said the Soviets sabotaged Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's attempts to negotiate a Sinai settlement last March.

"They went to the Syrians and the Palestinians and gave them what they described as the secret and public provisions of an interim Egyptian-Israeli agreement and told them they were in trouble," Sadat said.

"The same seditious rumor-mongers are in action today delivering false memoranda," he said.

Evidently addressing Syria and the Palestinians, the harshest critics of the accord, Sadat said, "I warn my Arab brothers against those who carry them false, deliberate news with the aim of blowing up the Arab situation."

He said the current split in the Arab world over the accord was "a tragedy that began when the Soviet Union sent a note to our brothers in Syria telling them it would not attend the signing ceremony."

Defending himself against Arab critics who charged that Egypt was selling out Syria and the Palestinians in order to win back a part of the Sinai from Israel, Sadat said that he rejected an offer of total Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai because of its commitments to the Arabs.

"I was offered a total withdrawal from the Sinai in return for ending the state of war with Israel but I refused because I have commitments to Syria and the Palestinian cause," the president said.

Russia snubs Sinai peace pact signing

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — Egypt and Israel signed their new interim Sinai peace accord Thursday, but both the Soviet Union and the United States stayed away from the brief, grim ceremony.

The Soviet Union boycotted the ceremony in anger at the plan to assign up to 200 American civilian technicians in the Sinai.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Alfred L. Atherton, who brought the official documents here to be signed, then decided to skip the ceremony himself rather than embarrass the Russians.

Shorly after the signing, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat denounced the Soviet Union.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said no significance could be read into the fact that the United States was not formally represented at the ceremony. He said "no set pattern has been established for these occasions."

Both Israeli and Egyptian sources said the Soviet-American absence had no effect on the agreement, worked out in 12 days of shuttle diplomacy by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Ford asks swift approval

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford appealed Thursday for swift congressional authorization to use American civilians to safeguard the new Israeli-Egyptian agreement in the Sinai. He called it "a gamble for peace to avoid the high probability of war."

Ford, who also disclosed that he would seek about $3 billion in new aid for the two nations, made the plea jointly with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger at an early morning White House meeting with Republican and Democratic congressional leaders.

Kissinger was said to have assured the leaders that "there will be no secret agreement that will be kept from Congress."

Kissinger later said "the American people will know everything we are committed to," and said all documents concerning the agreement will be provided the Senate Foreign Relations Committee when Undersecretary of State Joseph Sicco testifies on the agreement in detail.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen, briefing reporters aboard Air Force One, said Ford told the leaders he hopes the House and Senate can approve the use of about 200 U. S. technicians within two weeks so they can man electronic monitoring stations in a U. N. buffer zone in the Sinai a few days later.

Ford, according to Nessen, told the leaders the American promise to provide technicians was "a crucial and key element to the settlement" that Kissinger obtained.

"If we had let negotiations break down — and this was a key item — almost inevitably war would break out," Ford said.

Kissinger, according to Nessen, said plans call for Americans in groups of five or 10 to mix with Israeli technicians at one station and Egyptian personnel at another. At three other stations, Americans will work alone and the final three stations will be automated to operate without manpower.

White House officials confirmed reports that Ford outlined plans for an aid package in which Israel would get $2.1 to $2.3 billion in assistance during the current fiscal year, with $1.4 billion of it in military aid.

They said Egypt would receive $600-$650 million during the same period, all economic aid.

Administration accused of surrender to Meany

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Republican wheat-state senators Thursday accused the administration of an "unconscionable" surrender of power to AFL-CIO President George Meany by allowing his unions to block grain sales to the Soviet Union.

In a telegram to the White House, Sens. Robert Dole of Kansas and Henry Bellmon of Oklahoma urged President Ford to intervene immediately to "terminate Mr. Meany's dictatorial control over U.S. foreign trade policy and bring an end to the present cowardly kowtowing" to the labor chief.

The wire was sent within hours after Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, appearing before the Senate Agriculture Committee, on which Dole and Bellmon serve, acknowledged that further grain sales to the Russians were being held up because of a longshoremen's boycott of the shipments.

"This admission reveals an illegal, unprecedented assumption of power by an unelected private official," the senators told Ford.

"Equally as disturbing, Mr. President, the secretary's revelation reflects what amounts to an unconscionable abrogation of responsibility by your administration."

Dole introduced legislation to require negotiations with the Soviet Union to nail down grain sales on a long-term basis, suggesting levels be set at 12 million tons yearly for three or more years to avoid disruptions in American markets by "spot" sales to the Soviets.

Stage set for postal rate hike

The Postal Service Board of Governors officially set the stage Thursday for a boost in postal rates by Christmas, including an increase in the price of a first class stamp from 10 cents to 13 cents. But Chairman James M. Hanley of the House Postal Service subcommittee urged the Postal Service to postpone any increase in the first-class rate until after Christmas. Hanley, D-N. Y., said increasing the price from the current dime to the expected 13 cents "would create great and unnecessary confusion among the millions of Americans who mail holiday greetings."

Gunfire erupts in coalfields

Gunfire erupted Thursday in West Virginia's troubled coalfields, where armed pickets, struggling to keep a month-long wildcat strike going, forced strip miners to leave their jobs at gunpoint.

An official of the SSE Mining Co. said nearly 40 pickets with firearms brought work to a halt at the operation near Wharncliffe, about 14 miles northwest of Gilbert in Mingo County. The company spokesman said pickets disabled the firm's vehicles and short wave radio set and disarmed his crew of their own weapons. There have been no arrests or injuries.

Nixon OKs release of some documents

The White House said Thursday it has obtained former President Richard M. Nixon's consent to release some impounded Nixon documents to the Senate intelligence committee, with Nixon's lawyers to select the materials. Spokesmen announced the compromise agreement as the intelligence panel met to review its still-incomplete report on alleged plots by U. S. intelligence to kill foreign leaders. There were indications the report could become a hot potato, with committee members disagreeing on what conclusions should be endorsed.

Dems warn Ford on oil price action

Senate Democrats warned President Ford Thursday they can override his threatened veto of a six-month oil price control extension and urged him to sign the extension bill rather than set off a new veto battle. White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford would not veto the pending price control extension bill until Saturday, at the earliest, and had called again for compromise during a brief discussion of the energy issue with congressional leaders Thursday morning.

Scotts refuse to answer Hearst queries

Jack and Micki Scott, two of the government's key witnesses in the search for missing newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, refused to answer grand jury questions Thursday in its investigation of the mysterious Hearst case. Government prosecutors asked U. S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman to grant immunity to Micki Scott, as well as Martin Miller, a friend of the couple who also refused to testify. There was no indication why Jack Scott was not offered immunity.

If Judge Herman grants immunity, silence will become costly for Mrs. Scott and Miller, who could be jailed for contempt for up to 16 months.

Common law, constitution probed

The Illinois Commission on the Status of Women has undertaken a study on common law and its compliance with the Illinois Constitution of 1970.

The study is being conducted by the commission's legislative action committee, which is headed by Rep. Eugenia S. Chapman, D-Arlington Heights.

"States have many laws governing employment practices, crime and corrections, divorce, and the responsibilities of parents toward their children," said Mrs. Chapman. "There are vast areas of common, ordinary day-to-day living, however, that are not covered by statutory law, and it is here that the courts turn to the 'common law' for precedent in making its decisions."

As an example, Mrs. Chapman said most women are unaware that they have no claim to ownership in personal family property unless they can prove that it was given to them, purchased with their own money, or inherited by them.

The next meeting of the Commission on the Status of women is scheduled for Oct. 14 at the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LasSalle St., Chicago.

Mental-standards bill OKd

A bill requiring state mental institutions to adhere to the same standards required of private institutions has been signed into law by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Previously, Illinois law required the Dept. of Public Health to set standards for mental institutions, but had no provision for state-operated hospitals to follow those standards.

The bill signed by the governor was originally introduced in the Illinois General Assembly by the late Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge. Following Juckett's death in February, it was sponsored by Rep. John E. Porter, R-Evanston.

MONEY TALKS

What are we doing to beat inflation?

By Donald F. Morton, President
Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

After reading our columns for some time, one of our acquaintances asked how we proposed to beat inflation. While he did not use the words, we got the impression he was saying, "All right, wise guy, what would you do?"

From a family point of view, beating inflation means husbanding our resources, living within our means, making the most of what we've got.

First of all, this means saving some of the money we earn. Saving is not unpatriotic. It never was. Saving did not cause inflation. Over-spending did. If to preserve our capitalistic economy it becomes necessary for every family to spend itself into indebtedness, we are on the short road to fascism or national socialism.

Secondly, it means cutting out some of the fatty portions of the family budget. Food accounts for at least one-fifth of the average family expenditures. We are told that almost half of supermarket purchases are made on impulse; that is, they were not considered as necessities when the shopper ventured out to provide for the family's meals. A shopping list of necessities rigidly adhered to would help to cut down on needless food consumption — much of which may not be especially healthful, anyway.

Watching for bargains, measuring quantity against price (using a pocket calculator if necessary), recognizing brand differences in terms of quality and "watering," saving aluminum and plastic wraps for reuse, putting the kids' lunches into saved bread and other packagings — these are just some of the ways of tackling food expenditures, combating inflation by having cheaper money go further. A portion of the garden now in grass or flowers could help to provide table vegetables.

Other household ways of trimming the "fat" include making do with what the family has rather than replacing it. It seems that children these days have been educated by television to become bored with the old and to clamor for the new. Look at the rust spots on the car; let's get a new one. Why can't we have a refrig that makes its own ice cubes? Let's get a color TV with a big screen.

It doesn't take much dexterity or intelligence to acquire a do-it-yourself approach to home maintenance and repair. A home owner soon discovers he is much more assiduous in caulking and scraping than a painter who was hired to do the job. The increasing sales of sewing machines indicate homemakers are finding that repairs prolong the life of clothes and that making one's own is not only economical but creative as well.

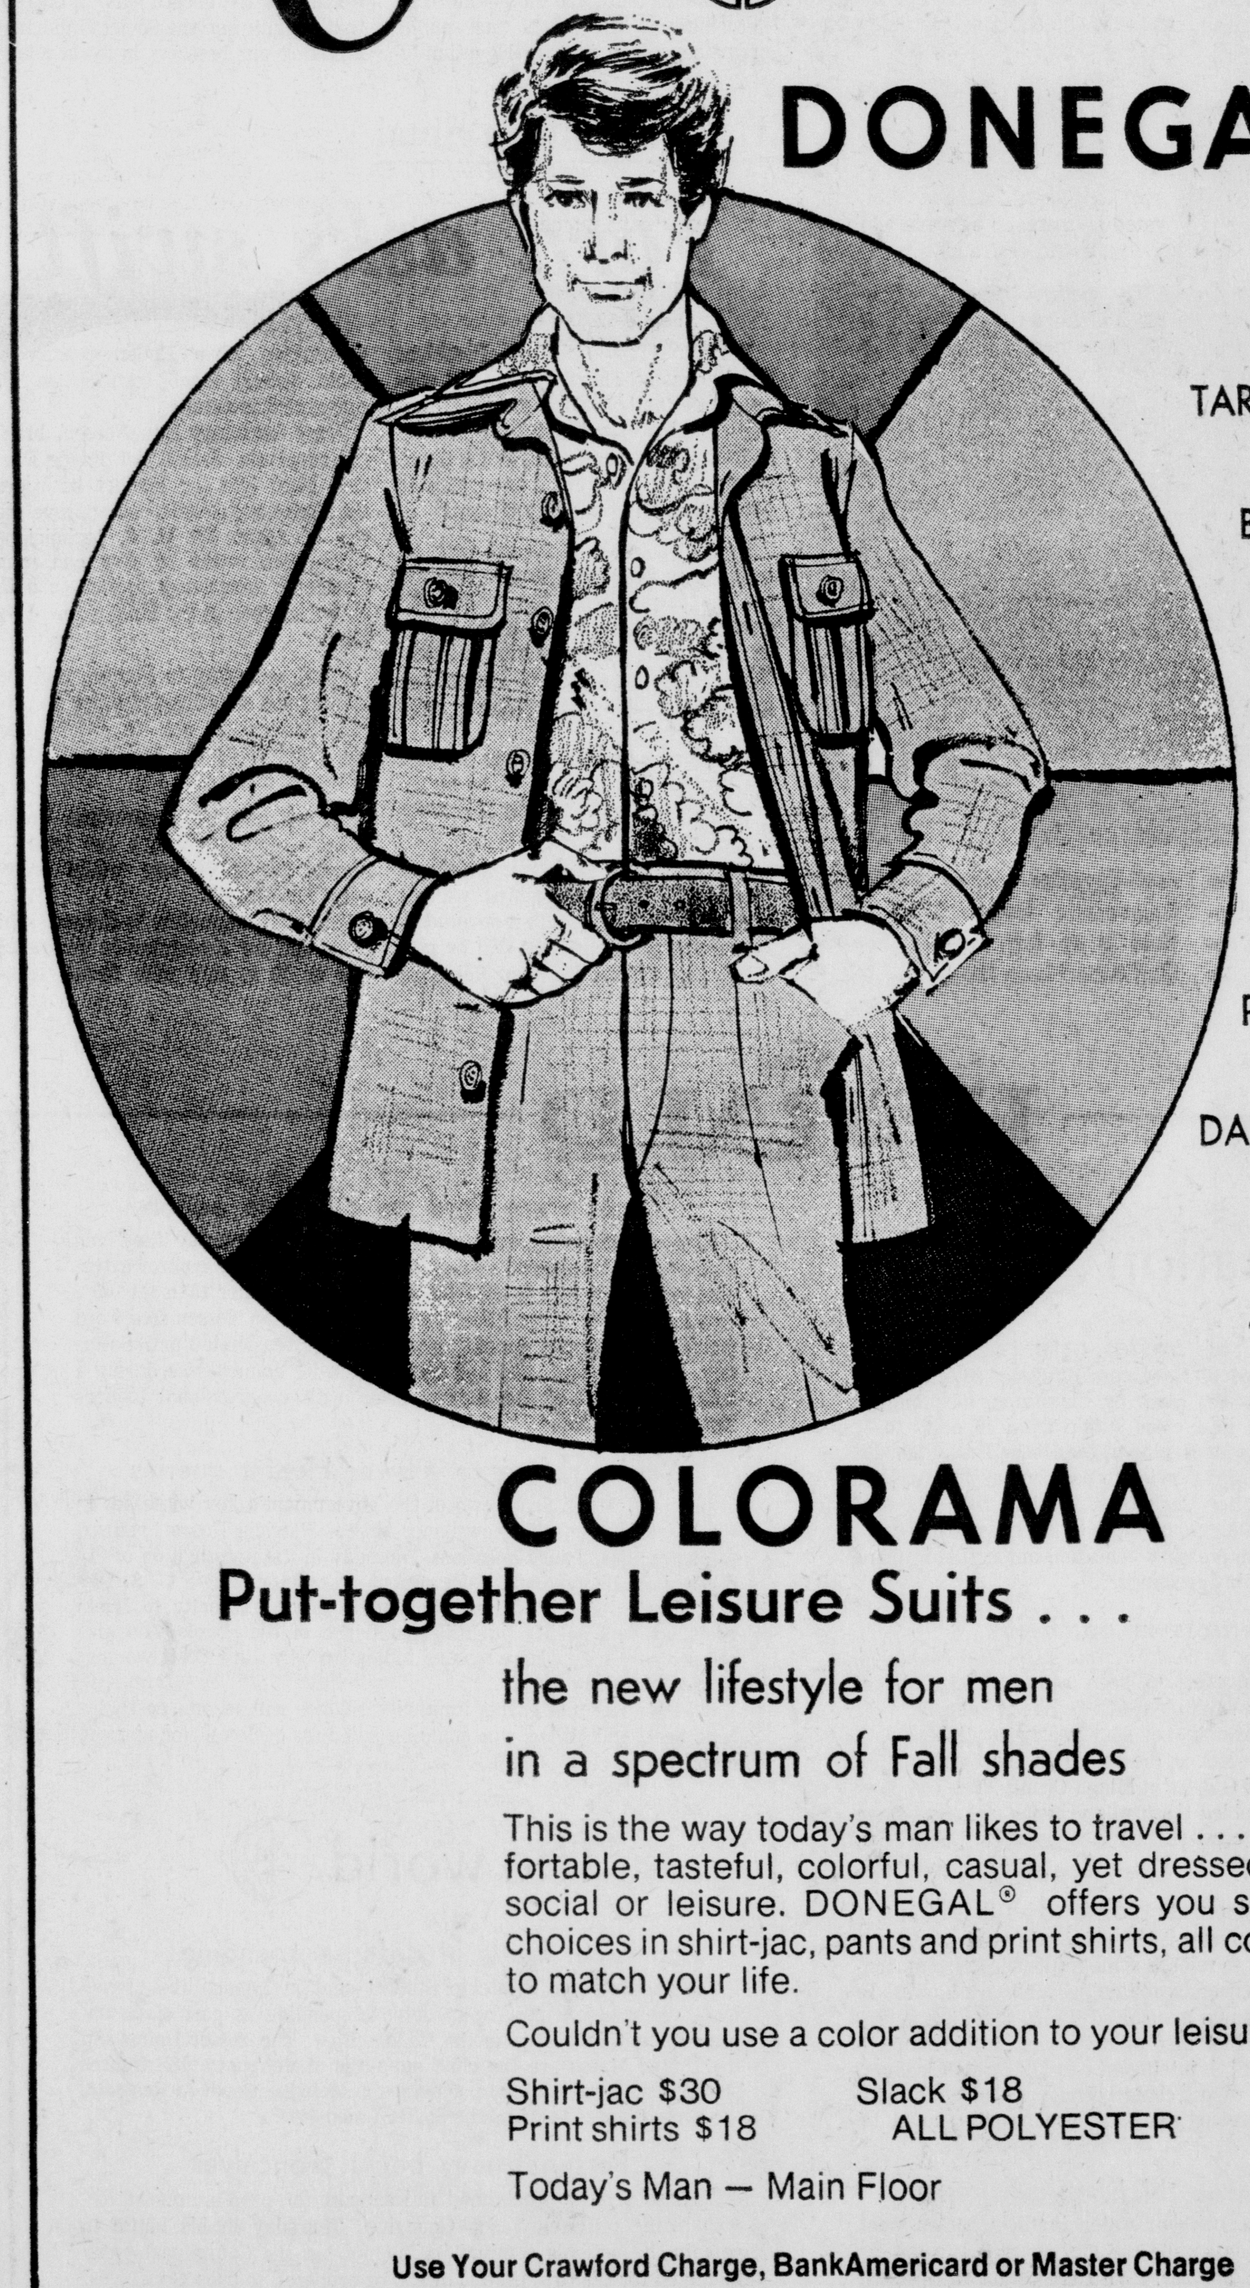

These are some of the ways a family fights inflation. We ask ourselves how we — and the nation — ever got seduced by the notion that there was another way of doing it.

County rezoning discussed: few express interest

by JERRY THOMAS

Officials in Elk Grove Township's six communities displayed little interest Wednesday in a first look at a new proposed county zoning map which shows few changes for the area.

"They are just not interested, probably because there are no drastic zoning changes, or maybe because a large part of the unincorporated land is forest preserve district," speculated Richard Stern, of Rolf Campbell and Associates, Inc., county zoning consultants.

Elk Grove Village was the only community represented at a session called by the consulting firm which was hired by the county.

Scattered in pockets between and within the township communities of Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect, Rolling Meadows, Elk Grove Village, Palatine and Des Plaines are 5,783 acres of unincorporated land.

THE BIGGEST parcel is 3,691 acres of forest preserve land.

Stern said he had expected some comment or interest from Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect officials about county plans for an area bordering Mount Prospect at the southeast end of Arlington Heights.

"It's a critical area in my opinion, and both communities have shown an interest for several years in planning how it will be developed or zoned," said Stern.

Stern said the proposed map shows a change from present single-family residtntial zoning to office-transitional on the west and east frontage properties bordering Arlington Heights Road between Central Road and Rte. 58.

RESIDENTS IN that area have fought against office building construction, and Stern said he expects many may appear at Wednesday's public hearing on the new maps.

Stern said although the proposed zoning change for that area is office transitional it would not make single-family housing now located there nonconforming. O-T zoning allows residential units he added.

Thomas Rettenbacher, building commissioner, and Robert Fleming, zoning board of appeals chairman, represented Elk Grove Village at the session held in the village's municipal building.

Rettenbacher said the county map held few surprises and closely followed the village's master zoning plan.

"WE WILL RESERVE comment, however, until the map has been reviewed in detail," said Rettenbacher.

Officials of all the Elk Grove Township communities will have a second chance to suggest revisions at the 4:30 p.m. Wednesday public hearing at the Elk Grove Village municipal building at 901 Wellington Ave., Elk Grove Village.

Stern said the zoning maps for all townships within the county are on display at County Zoning board offices, Room 310 in the Chicago Civic Center.

Countywide hearings will be in late October.

AN EFFECTIVE TEACHER looks beyond what her students say to the emotion behind their statements, Kathy Carlin, right, told Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 teachers at an institute day last week. Dist. 21 may soon offer a course in Teacher Effectiveness Training.

Getting to the root of student woes

by MARILYN McDONALD

A good teacher communicates well with students.

With that fact in mind, Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 is considering a program in Teacher Effectiveness Training for its staff through the district's self-renewal project.

Teacher Effectiveness Training instructs teachers to respond to the feelings expressed by children. It is a process of listening beyond the words being spoken to the emotions, which often reveal much more, said Kathy Carlin, a second grade teacher at Field School and a veteran of TET. She presented an example of how effectiveness training works during a district teachers' institute day held recently.

MRS. CARLIN asked the teachers to picture a dinner table scene, in which a 16-year-old boy announces he is fed up with school and has no intention of going to college. Teachers gave what they felt would be typical family responses: "I expect more of you than that."; "When you get older, you'll understand the value of education."; "After all we've done for you . . ."

Mrs. Carlin then asked the teachers to note how such responses would avoid the real issue: Why is the boy unhappy, and how can he solve his problem?

She said TET would train the listener to pinpoint the boy's emotion: "You're feeling frustrated about school." Although this may seem like simple repetition Mrs.Carlin said this response tells the boy you acknowledge his feelings and are not judging him.

BY ACKNOWLEDGING his feelings, you encourage him to open up to you, she said. TET teachers problem-solving techniques, Mrs. Carlin said.

TET also teaches ways of communicating one's own needs without sounding dictatorial, Mrs. Carlin said. If you can make the other person willing to change or do as you ask without hurting his self-esteem, you have bettered your relationship and fulfilled your own needs at the same time, she said.

Charge 2 village men with kidnaping

Two Arlington Heights men were arrested Thursday for allegedly kidnaping and beating an Elk Grove Village man.

Mark W. Beatty, 24, and Guy Crawford, 18, both of 2165 S. Tonne Dr., Apt. 106, were charged with aggravated kidnaping, aggravated battery and unlawful restraining.

The victim, James W. Case, 20, of 938 A Jefferson Sq., was released after treatment at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village.

The two men were arrested by Arlington Heights police at their apartment after Case escaped Thursday morning and found a ride to the Elk Grove Village police station, police said.

Case told police that Beatty and another man forced him to leave a friend's house in Glenview with them about 1 a.m. and drove him to the Arlington Heights apartment. He reported Crawford beat him with a billy club.

CASE SAID HE escaped through the front door of the apartment about 9 a.m. and flagged down a passing motorist for a ride to the police station. From there, he was transported by ambulance to the hospital.

Case told police he had a "running feud" with Beatty and Crawford and the pair had kidnaped him several months ago and held him for two days. The incident was never reported to police.

Police said they found stereo equipment, which they said they believed to be stolen and drug paraphernalia in the apartment. Investigation into the incident was continuing, police reported.

Beatty and Crawford were being held in lieu of $20,000 bond each in the Arlington Heights lockup pending appearances Sept. 19 in the Arlington Heights branch of Circuit Court.

Girl, 14, reported raped in backyard

A 14-year-old Arlington Heights girl told police late Wednesday she was raped while in the backyard of her home.

The girl reported she was assaulted by a man about 10:15 p.m. after walking her boyfriend to the Chicago and North Western train station in downtown Arlington Heights.

Police investigate garage burglary

Mount Prospect police are investigating a burglary in which about $300 in tools was reported stolen Wednesday from the Robert Nichols garage, 713 N. Pine St.

Also taken was a tool box, police were told. Entry was gained through a garage door, police said.

Health unit dedication set

An $18,000 mobile medical-dental health unit to serve backstretch workers at Chicago-area race tracks will be dedicated Wednesday at Arlington Park Race Track.

A physicion, two dentists, two dental technicians and a registered nurse practitioner will use the new unit to provide health services to the people working and living at Arlington, Hawthorne and Sportsmans race tracks.

The health unit on wheels was donated by the Horsemen's Benevolent Protection Assn., Chicago Division.

There are approximately 700 men and women who work in the large stable area at Arlington Park Race Track during the summer racing season. In the past, many of these backstretch workers have had to depend on emergency room treatment at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights.

"The program is believed to be the first of its kind at a U.S. track and is desperately needed by the people who care for horses at the track," said HBPA's president, W. H. Bishop.

Lucy Reum, a member of the Illinois Racing Board who has been trying to improve living and working conditions in the backstretch, said she was "very proud" of the new health care service.

'Land acquistion to move quickly'

James T. Ryan, Arlington Heights village president, Thursday said land acquisitions will proceed as expeditiously as possible in connection with two grants recently approved by the state and federal governments.

Ryan said village officials met Thursday to discuss procedures for acquiring the Hill-Behan Lumber Co. property which is destined to become a commuter parking lot.

After a fair market value is determined, the state will contribute $33,000 to the project and the federal government will pay 80 per cent of the remaining costs.

Funds for the acquisition of 113 acres of land along McDonald Creek east of Windsor Drive for the future development of Lake Arlington also will be allocated, Ryan said.

The two grants total $1.25 million.

Ryan said that he will make every effort to see that the projects are completed as soon as possible within the established state and federal guidelines.

IT TAKES KNOWLEDGE TO TREAT THE ILL

Despite great advances in medical knowledge, there are still some people who depend on old fashioned self-treatments. Some let persons with no drug or medical training advise them what medicines to take.

When door-to-door peddlers or mail order opportunists presume to tell you what to take when you are ill - be wise. In order to treat illness a diagnosis of the cause is needed. No one but a physician has this knowledge.

Judge finds college teachers' union in contempt

Cook County Circuit Court Judge Sheldon Brown Thursday found the Cook County College Teachers Union in contempt of court for refusing to end an 11-day-old strike and fined the union $1,000 for each day of the walkout. The judge said the fine will be raised to $5,000 a day beginning Friday.

Teachers in four Illinois high school and elementary districts also were on strike Thursday. The walkouts incuded 29,000 teachers, including those in Chicago, the state's largest district, and Elgin, the third largest unit district. A total of 568,716 students were affected by the walkouts.

In Chicago, School Superintendent Joseph Hannon announced the city's schools will be closed for a third day on Friday. Negotiations continued between the school board and the Chicago Teachers' Union.

Sheriff Clavey test urged

Government lawyers asked a federal judge Thursday to order psychiatric tests to determine if former Sheriff Orville Clavey of Lake County is mentally competent to stand trial.

Clavey is scheduled to be tried on perjury, tax fraud and extortion charges Sept. 22. He is accused of extorting protection money from the Cheetah II, a night spot in Half Day.

Assistant U.S. Attorney George N. Gilkerson, the government prosecutor, asked Judge Thomas R. McMillen to order the psychiatric tests. Gilkerson said defense attorneys had provided the U.S. Attorney's office with a letter from Dr. Milton Margoles of the Kenosha Memorial Hospital, Kenosha, Wis., stating that Clavey was admitted Aug. 25 with a "provisional diagnosis of depression reaction, neuropsychosis with anxiety status."

A second letter from the medical staff at St. Therese Hospital in Waukegan observed that Clavey might have symptoms of an undiagnosed psychological ailment, Gilkerson said.

McMillen, serving as emergency judge, continued the case until Sept. 12 before Judge William J. Lynch.

2 boys drown in Algonquin

Two boys fell out of a canoe and drowned Thursday night as it went over a Fox River dam near Illinois 62 bridge in Algonquin, authorities said. A third boy managed to swim to safety. McHenry County Coroner Theron Ehron said he would withhold the boys' identities until their relatives could be notified.

The bodies were recovered about half an hour after the accident.

Illinois briefs

Bush conviction upheld

The U.S. Court of Appeals Thursday upheld the mail fraud conviction of Earl Bush, former press secretary for Mayor Richard J. Daley.

The court rejected the contention of Bush that the federal mail fraud statute was misapplied in his case.

The appeals court panel found the government had shown that Bush "engaged in a scheme to defraud the mayor and the citizens of Chicago" by concealing his interest in a firm that did business with the city. It said he had "used the mail in the furtherance of that scheme."

Cohen pleads guilty

Village Trustee David Cohen of Morton Grove pleaded guilty Thursday to federal charges of extorting more than $1,000 from a builder in a zoning change case. Cohen, 43, entered the plea before U.S. District Court Judge Frank J. McGarr, who set Oct. 29 for sentencing.

Cohen was indicted Aug. 13 on charges of accepting the $1,000 payoff from Ben Pekin, owner of the Ben Pekin Corp. of Northbrook. The money allegedly changed hands in 1970.

The government said Pekin sought a zoning change so he could build Lotus Towers, a rental complex that now stands in Morton Grove, and that Cohen saw that the zoning change was made in return for the $1,000.

GM to pay $1.1 million

General Motors Corp. will pay $1.1 million in damages to two persons who lost family members in an accident caused by a defective transmission in a newly purchased GM recreational vehicle.

Circuit Court Judge Robert Cherry said Thursday he had completed orders in an out-of-court settlement calling for GM to pay $650,000 to Margaret Caron of DeKalb and $450,000 to Thatcher Robinson of Champaign.

Miss Caron's parents and sister were killed in the accident. Robinson lost his wife and three of his four sons.

Cherry said Robinson testified he was driving the vehicle — bought six hours earlier — when the transmission shifted from low to neutral and the vehicle began rolling down a mountain road in Gunnison County, Colo.

Rock promoters file suit

Promoters of a court-canceled Aurora Downs rock concert filed suit in federal court Thursday seeking a temporary restraining order that would allow them to hold the Allman Brothers-Seals and Crofts event anyway. Twin Productions, Inc., filed the suit, contesting a North Aurora Village ordinance banning rock concerts.

The suit asked that the ordinance be found unconstitutional and sought $100,000 in actual damages and $75,000 in punitive damages. It named the village of North Aurora and its board of trustees as defendants.

Pistachio nut imports drop; creameries stretch supplies years now. The price has been $2-and-some-cents a pound. We can't put them in ice cream at that price," a Bresler's spokesman said.

Instead of the real pistachios, Bresler's sells ice cream with almonds and pistachio flavoring. The almonds provide the texture, crunchiness and the nutty eye appeal to the flavoring, he said.

Baskin-Robbins and Borden's still sell the pistachios in their ice cream — in a combination of the Iranian nuts and good old American almonds.

Baskin-Robbins has taken it a step further and added a stripe of fudge for one of their 31 flavors: pistachio almond fudge.

WHETHER THE NUTS are mixed with almonds or separated by fudge, the Midwest Nut and Seed Co. reports that pistachios are selling for $1.80 to $1.60 per pound, depending on size.

The spokesman for the nut company said the Shah turned some of his pistachios loose on the market when the price for the nuts started to rise. However, not enough were released to bring the price down.

The outlook for pistachio partisans next year is not bright either, the company said. The new crop is expected to be smaller than the bumper harvest of this year.

The result? Higher prices once more, according to Midwest Nut.

"It's a high-priced item for ice cream. Not many companies use them anymore. A few still do, but not that many," said Midwest's spokesman.

HE DID NOT say whether the plan was linked to Project Independence, but the nut spokesman said efforts were underway to produce American pistachios.

Ice cream lovers aren't licked yet. Their cry is to keep the American pistachio supply independent so that we are never again at the mercy of some free lunch program.

Shah of Iran, nuts to you.

College ethics law OKd

Community college officials and candidates for community college offices will be required to file economic interest statements under a law signed recently by Gov. Daniel Walker.

The bill was sponsored by Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, to correct an "oversight" which exempted community college officials from the requirement demanded on all other elected officials and candidates.

Walker also signed a bill sponsored by Regner to abolish the Personnel Training Revolving Fund in the state treasury, which, Regner says, "costs more in bookkeeping expense than it is worth in terms of accountability."

Abolition of the fund was recommended by the Illinois Economic and Fiscal Commission, of which Regner is vice chairman.

Fast heart beat not harmful unless there's other problems

I am being treated for mild high blood pressure with Hydropress and take Valium. I'm 46, male, 5 feet 9 inches and weigh 205 pounds. I'm a good 40 pounds overweight. My work is 60 per cent sedentary and I'm just recovering from a broken ankle that keeps me down.

My bad habits include smoking a pipe without inhaling and a drink now and then. I use decaffeinated coffee, and other than the above I have always been in good health.

My problem is attacks of rapid heart action. I can be sitting reading with a heart rate of 68 when it suddenly jumps to 100 or 125. Sometimes this is accompanied by very weak feelings. One attack was so bad my wife called the rescue squad, as I felt I was going under.

Also, in the morning hours I have very heavy, achy feelings in the thighs and calves of legs. I am tired and depressed, which is unlike my previous nature.

My doctor says everything is O.K., and my blood pressure is good with Hydropress, but I get no satisfaction on what causes the rapid heart attacks or what to do about it.

Is this a side effect of the Hydropress?

To identify exactly what your rapid heart action is, it would be necessary to get an electrocardiogram during one. The description of sudden onset does suggest one of the tachycardias caused by an irritable spot in either the atria or the ventricles. They can be very disagreeable, often depending on how fast the heart rate actually is. I have seen rather healthy men with this problem who had attacks with rates of 100 to 120, and they never knew the heart was doing this. I suspect you are more aware of your body and its behavior than they were. That may have something to do with your general nervousness.

We don't always know what causes such attacks. Unless they are part of some other heart problem, they are usually not dangerous. They can be caused by an overactive thyroid — probably not your problem in view of your tendency to obesity — alcohol, coffee, anxiety and sometimes on the basis of an inherited variation in the heart's electrical mechanism.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb

If your attacks are severe and frequent, your doctor could give you medicine to calm your heart down. I do not mean another sedative, but medicines such as quinidine (there are now many others) that have a direct action on soothing the heart.

You'll be paying the bill, so let Congress know your choice!

Congress is about to make an important decision that could affect the cost and gas mileage of your car for years to come.

Since you will be paying the bill, we thought you should be aware of two major alternatives being considered by Congress right now. They concern the control of emissions from cars. Should the standards governing automotive emissions be made even stricter than they are today? Or are they strict enough now? Take your choice.

Choice 1

The President and his Administration have evaluated the pros and cons of current law governing emissions and recommend that the standards for today's cars be extended for five years.

Results

- There will be continued improvement of air quality as new cars replace old cars. (Compared to pre-controlled cars, today's standards result in reductions of over 80% for hydrocarbons and for carbon monoxide and about 40% for oxides of nitrogen according to industry data.)
- Working with current standards, automakers can meet their individual commitments to the President and improve industry-wide gas mileage between 1974 and 1980 by an average of at least 40%.

Choice 2

Present Federal Law calls for even stricter emissions standards for 1977-1978 model cars than those required today. Some members of Congress favor these stricter standards.

Results

- Stricter standards would add only marginal improvement to air quality. (California is an exception. It has a special air quality problem and has its own special standards.)
- To our knowledge no auto manufacturer yet knows how to meet the 1978 standards on a mass production basis. Current "best effort" experimental systems however indicate the following fuel economy and cost penalties:
  - —your gas mileage could be reduced by 5% to as much as 30% according to publicly stated company estimates
  - —the cost of your car could increase by an estimated $150 to $400 according to company estimates in statements to Congress.

Where do you stand?

These are the choices. We thought you ought to know what they are, and what they will mean to you as a customer. Your United States Senators and Representative should know what you think. Write to them.

Let your U.S. Senators and Representative know your choice.

Herald opinion

Funeral cost bill necessary

Much of the mystery surrounding the $2 billion funeral industry may be cleared up, thanks to a new industry trade regulation proposed by the Federal Trade Commission.

We support the disclosure standard as a boon to bereaved buyers who are especially vulnerable to emotional and economic costs.

Exploitative, unfair and deceptive practices by funeral homes would be prohibited under the new trade rule, the FTC says. The commission believes that improper sales tactics and the failure to disclose information about costs and services have inflicted substantial injuries on many consumers.

A 1974 Herald series on the cost of dying supports the FTC's claim that bereaved buyers may be denied full price information and that the information is sometimes difficult to obtain. Unaware that services may be provided for as little as $300, buyers may find it difficult to make a rational choice of funeral arrangements.

The FTC's proposed funeral practice regulation, if adopted in its present form, will promote competition among morticians. It will override any restrictions on advertisement of funeral costs and prohibit a number of anti-competitive practices which inflict a heavy cost on consumers.

The regulation would prohibit funeral directors from picking up or embalming corpses without family permission, disparaging a consumer's concern about price, offering unsubstantiated claims about the watertightness or airtightness of caskets and burial vaults, requiring those who choose cremation to purchase a casket, refusing to make available the inexpensive containers suitable for cremation and other practices. An itemized list of prices for services and merchandise would be provided to customers, along with a fact sheet about legal requirements for embalming, caskets and burial vaults and a casket price list.

There are funeral directors who offer full disclosure of costs and services to customers. For these business executives, the proposed trade rule will mean little, if any, change in operations.

Those who do not willingly provide needed consumer information, however, will be forced to serve customers in a fashion that is long overdue.

Credit card surcharge no help to consumer

If you use credit cards as a convenience to avoid paying cash, you may be about to become a victim of a hidden and excessive credit charge.

The culprit is the Federal Reserve Board, which has proposed a hidden surcharge of up to 5 per cent on credit card sales.

The proposal, now scheduled to go into effect on Oct. 28, would permit merchants to add the surcharge to a card user's bill without his or her knowledge. It boils down to a roundabout way of encouraging merchants to offer discounts to consumers who want to pay cash rather than use a credit card.

U.S. Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., has threatened legislation to counteract the hidden charge; he says it could cost credit card users billions of dollars a year. It already costs money, either in annual dues or finance charges, to use a credit card; all the Fed's proposal would accomplish would be to discourage the continued heavy use of credit cards. The Fed should reconsider its unwise proposal; otherwise, Congress should pass legislation to prevent this abuse from becoming a realtiy.

No home for those like Nancy?

Since the McHenry County Board stonily and stubbornly refused permission Aug. 12 for STAR to purchase the St. Joseph Novitiate (in spite of approval from the zoning board of appeals) in order to create a residential facility for severely retarded adults, there will be no home for Nancy.

Nancy is an 18-year-old friend of mine who happened to be born a mongoloid with cerebral palsy. She has brought affection and tenderness to many of us whose lives have touched hers. Her helplessness as an infant enabled an older brother to express love. Her courage inspired her sister to enter the field of retardation where she has taught others to reach toward their own potentials.

Nancy's smiles are genuine and enthusiastic — her affection liberally extended. She has been a loved and loving member of her family for 18 years. But the burden is heavy for her parents whose other children have all left the family home to create their own pattern of life. Since Nancy has difficulty walking, the burden is physical as well as emotional and increases each year.

The special school that Nancy attends can no longer take her when she reaches 21. A home is needed for Nancy soon. A residential facility where she will be loved and accepted just as she is with a myriad of activities to keep her outgoing personality happy. We had hoped that the beautiful setting of St. Joseph's Novitiate would be that home. Due to vocal opposition from an insensitive few there will be no home for Nancy.

Village backing fire referendum

Dear Palatine residents:

Sept. 9 is an important day for the future of the Village of Palatine. The village board has decided to ask your support for a significant change in our fire department.

In 1960, when I moved to Palatine, the village had one full-time fireman, Chief Orville Helms, and many capable volunteers from throughout the community. The population was 12,000. From 1960 (and a long time before) through 1973, the village was served basically by well-trained volunteers. These volunteers still do a great service for this village. However, times have changed and the group of volunteers is diminishing. Since 1973, at no increase in taxes, 11 full-time firemen have been added to complement the 20 remaining volunteers. A very responsive and successful paramedic program has been expanded since its inception in the early 1970s.

Now, with a population of 30,000 and a protection area of 50,000, dramatic and rapid changes are needed to adequately protect the citizens of Palatine. Changes which are this dramatic and rapid in government are infrequent. Historically, it is so significant that the village board is seeking public approval for these overdue expansion plans. The cost will be $20 to $30 per home. The board felt, and I agree, that a tax increase of that magnitude should be taken to the people. We will abide by your decision. We urge you to become informed and exercise your voice in government by voting on the fire referendum on Sept. 9.

With your help, Palatine's history will record that the people responded when called upon to expand needed fire and paramedic services.

Wendell E. Jones

Ban on cycles decried by two

I would like to say I am dissatisfied at the Village of Arlington Heights prohibiting motor-driven cycles and motorcycles in large fields, both publicly and privately owned. It would be to the village's advantage to have a designated riding area for the pleasure of motorcycle riders without disturbing others. Without such a system many young people and adults will be needlessly arrested and fined. By the careless misuse of some currently available cycling areas, we are slowly losing all the places we can ride in. If more regulations and tests of ability were given to the on-road rider as well as the off-road rider more control could be had. And more consideration could be had for people and property alike.

Imperial Wizard Venable

'KKK same as other secret clubs'

by BRUCE B. BAKKE

ATLANTA (UPI)—Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton says members of the Ku Klux Klan now wear business suits, not robes, to conventions. Robes and cross burnings are mainly ceremonial.

Imperial Wizard James R. Venable contends the Klan is not much different from any other secret society, such as the Masons or the Knights of Columbus.

Klan leaders all insist they are working through the establishment for goals they think are needed to keep America great. They even have a candidate for president, Dale Reusch of Ohio.

But Ku Klux Klan literature is as strident as ever. The campaign against blacks, Jews and Catholics has not changed.

FOR EXAMPLE, a book by Venable, last updated in 1974, states: "One drop of Negro blood in a white man's veins does not create another white man. It creates a Negro, forever kinking the hair, flattening the nose and thickening the lips. Also, it forever dulls the intellect . . ."

The book says that while the Klan is not anti-Catholic, "It pities all Catholics in their foreign papal enslavement and prays that they may be free of it."

Lumping some of the enemies of the Klan in one sentence, Venable said, "We now know that the greatest group of salesmen we have for our cause are the Kennedys, the Martin Luther Kings, the Jake Javitses, the Goldwaters, and all the swine rabbis of Jewism."

The Klan originally was founded in 1869 in Tennessee. Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest, a Confederate Army veteran, was the grand wizard and as the organization spread to other states the state leaders, known as Grand Dragons, usually were men who had been prominent Confederate Army officers.

The purpose of the Klan in those days was to control former black slaves and to offer protection against white carpetbaggers trying to exploit the South during the days of reconstruction. It eventually was disbanded by Forrest.

THE KLAN WAS revived in 1915 at Stone Mountain, Ga., with a rally on property then owned by the Venable family. The original Klan had the respect of many in the South but the revived Klan and its offshoots have been condemned in all parts of the country.

During the 1920s it was connected with lynchings and whippings of blacks. Sometimes Jews and Catholics were targets.

It is estimated as many as four million Americans belonged to the Klan in both the South and the North during its high-water mark in the 1920s.

Venable says there now are 42 separate and distinct organizations known as the Klan in the United States. The two largest are his group, the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, and the United Klans of America headed by Shelton in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

Presidential candidate Reusch is the Ohio grand dragon of the United Klans and Scott Nelson, the candidate for vice president, is imperial wizard of a group known as the Texas Fiery Knights of the KKK.

THE PRESENT POSITION of the Klan regarding Catholics indicates something of a disagreement.

Reusch said in December, as he announced his candidacy for president, that Catholics can apply for membership and that in Ohio more than 50 cent of the members are Catholics. He said this was a national program.

Venable disagrees emphatically. When asked about Reusch's statement, he said, "He was wrong. A Catholic, if he renounces his ties to the Pope of Rome, we accept him."

But Venable indicated he thought his qualification would rule out "good Catholics, loyal to their church."

Venable, a 70-year-old attorney, later said of Reusch, "He's probably playing politics. He's got it in his head to run for president.

"First of all, the Klan can never get on the ticket. The Klan could never get a candidate elected at this time. The South could never get a candidate elected at this time. I don't think George Wallace even has a chance to get elected as President."

Klan plans to be major political power by 1980

by WILLIAM COTTERELL

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. (UPI) — The National Knights of Ku Klux Klan now has to support political candidates behind the scenes, a Klan leader says — but by 1980 office seekers will come "begging the Klan for an endorsement."

The Klan did not make its preferences for 1976 known publicly at its convention during the Labor Day weekend. But leaders said privately the Klan is supporting Alabama Gov. George Wallace, with some sentiment for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, for president.

Imperial Klaliff James Lumpkin, a Thomaston, Ga., textile worker, said a Klan endorsement would hurt a potential office-holder this year. He said there are nearly 80,000 Klan sympathizers in Georgia alone. But he said the hooded order's endorsement hurt former Gov. Lester Maddox in his unsuccessful bid for the governorship last year.

"In a few years the Klan will be so powerful we'll have candidates begging the Klan for an endorsement," Lumpin said as he packed his robes into the back seat of a dusty automobile following a Saturday night cross-burning at the foot of Stone Mountain.

"I THINK we'll support Gov. Wallace, but we can't say yet," he said. "He's not a racist. He's a fairly level-headed guy."

The group's annual convention, in a suburban cow pasture, had been marred by violence as angry Klansmen punched, shoved, kicked, cursed and spat upon two blacks and five young whites seeking entrance to the press area.

A few stones hit the intruders and their car. There were no injuries.

"Now hold your tempers and act like Klansmen," shouted Imperial Wizard James Venable, head of the Klan and owner of the cow pasture, to the 500 Klansmen. "These niggers were sent here to provoke you into doing something to discredit the Klan."

DR. ROBERT Pritchard of Baldwinsville, N.Y., said he and the other members of the Syracuse, N.Y. -based Pan American Association came to the rally to "study the resurgence of hate groups in America." Pritchard, who is black, carried press credentials from the Afro-American News Group in Baltimore.

"I had no illusions about what would happen, and I was not only interested as a newsman but as a man who loves his country enough to want to see its true face," said Pritchard. "I've been a student of the Klan for many years."

"Many of the Klansmen were very courteous," he said. "The Klan leadership cannot control its mob members although Mr. Venable sincerely tried."

Harper faculty set to vote on union

by WANDALYN RICE

The Harper College faculty will decide whether to join a union in a vote conducted by mail beginning Sept. 19.

The results of the vote will be announced during the first week of October by the accounting firm of Peat, Marwick and Mitchell, which will oversee the election, said Thomas McCabe, vice president of the Harper Faculty Senate.

The vote will determine whether the Harper faculty wants to affiliate with any national union. If the vote is affirmative, an election will be held later to determine which union the faculty will join, McCabe said.

Representatives of three faculty groups will be on the Harper campus Wednesday and Thursday of next week to talk to the faculty, McCabe said. The organizations are the Cook County College Teachers Union, the Illinois Education Assn. and the American Assn. of University Professors.

LAST SPRING, in an informal straw poll, faculty members voted by a 2 to 1 margin to affiliate with a union and faculty leaders said they would hold a formal election this fall. Only 110 of the 196 full-time permanent faculty voted in the straw poll, McCabe said.

He said a majority of the 196 faculty members eligible to vote in the election will be needed to approve affiliation. "In effect if a faculty member doesn't vote that will be a no vote," he said. "I think it will be close."

McCabe said the accounting firm will mail ballots to faculty members on Sept. 19 and the ballots will have to be returned by Sept. 29. He said results will be announced on or before Oct. 6.

THE HARPER FACULTY has voted in previous years against joining a union. The straw poll was conducted last spring after negotiators working on this year's salary contract charged the college board of trustees with bad faith in a dispute over how the contract settlement related to the salary ranges for various faculty positions.

The faculty senate this summer won a court case against the college on the issue of salary ranges. The college board had raised the ranges for various faculty positions (instructor, assistant professor, professor) by less than the agreed salary settlement, meaning senior faculty members near the top ranges would have received less than the agreed raise.

In another action involving the Harper faculty, David Macaulay, a chemistry instructor, was elected president of the Harper Faculty Senate, replacing Robert Powell, who has served as senate president for two years.

Macaulay said he does not expect the faculty senate to take an official position on whether the faculty should affiliate with a union. "The previous senate decided not to take a stand on this issue and I think I agree with that," he said. "We want to make sure the faculty is aware of the issues, but we don't want to urge a position."

August car sales hit 5-year low, but it's no surprise

DETROIT (UPI) — The U.S. auto industry, already looking forward to next year, said Thursday its August new car sales hit a five-year low and fell about 17 per cent from the previous year. Industry spokesmen said the decline was no surprise.

As the Big Four announced its latest figures, Henry Ford II, chairman of the automobile company his grandfather founded, predicted an end to the industry's longest and deepest slump since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

"Our optimism," Ford said, "is based largely on mounting evidence that the bottom of the recession has been passed and the national economy is gradually gaining gstrength."

Speaking during the final day of the Ford Motor Co. preview of its 1976 cars and trucks, Ford predicted new car sales next year will reach 9.5 million. The figure this model year is expected to hit about 8.1 million, the lowest in 13 years.

GENERAL MOTORS Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp. and American Motors Corp. said they sold 534,290 new cars in August, vs. 667,237 last August. But sales for the month last year were distorted by a late buyers' rush to beat increased prices on 1975 models.

GM said its sales last month fell 15.2 per cent, from 333,738 last August to 272,439, while Ford said its sales declined 17.1 per cent from 196,608 a year ago to 156,923.

Chrysler, the No. 3 automaker, reported the sharpest fall — down 22 per cent with sales declining from 107,834 to 81,012.

AMC said its sales declined nearly 18 per cent with sales in August totaling 23,916 versus 29,057 one year ago.

Auto executives generally expressed satisfaction with the August figures.

"We're confident that the upward trend will continue and assist our dealers in clearing the decks for our 1976 models," Ford vice president Walter Walla said.

FOREIGN CARS again cut deeply into Detroit sales in August.

Reports by major importers showed one of every five new cars sold in the United States last month was built overseas.

At his news conference, Ford and company president Lee A. Iacocca said they expect a fairly good — if not excellent — sales year in 1976. Ford conceded the company's new models contain few dramatic changes.

"THE BIGGEST change in our 1976 models is a major, across-the-board improvement in fuel economy—an improvement that we expect will average at least 3.5 miles per gallon," he said.

Ford did not disclose the company's proposed 1976 price hikes, but he called increases unavoidable.

"The increases will be a good deal smaller than they were last year," he said, "and smaller than the general increase in consumer prices."

FORD ALSO said his company intends to sell, before the end of the 1977 model year, cars that get more than 40 miles per gallon.

The company is committed to more than $4 billion by 1980 in developing cars that meet new government safety and pollution control standards. But Ford said it was time for the government to give the auto industry a break in mandating standards.

"What we need is for the government to stop piling on additional requirements at this particular time, with little regard for the consequences," Ford said. "We need the government to recognize that the impossible cannot be made possible by statute or regulation."

Stock market up slightly: gain 6.02 points

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market meandered Thursday before registering a modest gain in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

After seesawing throughout most of the session, the Dow Jones industrial average, an 8.60-point winner Wednesday, managed to gain 6.02 points to 838.31.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.17 to 86.30. The average price of an NYSE common share increased four cents. Advances edged declines, 728 to 589, among the 1,752 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 12,810,000 shares, up from 12,260,000 traded Wednesday.

TRADING WAS quiet and prices changed little in the bond market. Short-term interest rates generally were lower.

Steels in particular were strong. U.S. Steel, third most active issue, gained 2¾ to 68-1/8 on 163,100 shares. Bethelehem gained 1¼ to 39-1/8, Lukens 1-5/8 to 25-7/8 and Republic 1 to 33-3/8.

Gold mining issues, recovering from a slump earlier in the week after the International Monetary Fund agreed to sell gold to benefit poorer countries, recovered for a second day. Bullion prices rose on foreign exchanges. Dome Mines gained 7/8 to 41-5/8, ASA Ltd. ¾ to 36½ and Campbell Red Lake 5/8 to 24-1/8.

Texaco led off the Big Board actives, off 1/8 to 23¾ on 457,000 shares, including a block of 340,000 shares at 23-3/8. Other oils were lower.

GETTY OIL plunged 4¾ to 183½, Atlantic Richfield 3 to 96½ and Sun Oil 1-1/8 to 31¾. Cities Service, which postponed the start up of a copper mine in Arizona, lost 78 to 42¼.

Copeland Corp. was the second most active issue, off ½ to 10¼ on 168,900 shares, including a block of 167,500 shares at 10-1/8.

Prices closed slightly higher in sluggish trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased five cents. Volume totaled 330,000 shares, compared with 1,110,000 traded Wednesday.

Soaking up the last rays

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Enjoy the last rays of summer while they last. But what's left to do after the beaches and pools close, vacation bills rule out the race track and the animals at the zoo are beginning to recognize you?

One suggeston is the First National Plaza, corner of Dearborn and Monroe, Chicago. Maybe you've already discovered it during a shopping excursion in the Loop. There's plenty happening over the extended, weekday noon hour and the price is right, too.

You can soak up the sunshine and participate in people watching free of charge. A foot-long hot dog with a carton of juice is priced at $1, a bag of popcorn just 25 cents. Pizza by the slice and ice cream are available around the corner.

SINCE THE banking complex opened two years ago, Loop shoppers and workers have been regularly brown-bagging it on the steps and around the center fountain of the bank plaza to take advantage of the weekday free entertainment that includes concerts, puppet shows, speakers and demonstrations.

Recently a frog-jumping contest was the main attraction. Sometimes sports celebrities are on hand to coordinate audience participation. People are invited to line up to hit a baseball, shoot a basket, take a pass.

In addition to noontime entertainment, several special jazz and dance evenings are sponsored two to three times a month beginning at 5 p.m.

Two outdoor cafes allow visitors to wine and dine in style. Quiches, hot sandwiches and super ice cream desserts and drinks are specialties of the house.

The Fountain Terrace off Monroe Street affords a view of the whole Plaza while the Chagall mosaic wall acts as a backdrop to the Dearborn Cafe.

MONDAY, beginning at noon, Mickey the Monkey and the Organ Grinder will present a program appealing particularly to young children.

Tuesday the Northern Illinois University Jazz Ensembles will play. They are two different bands that together provide a big-band sound.

Galen, a pianist who has played in lounges throughout the Northwest suburbs, will be featured Wednesday and Dave Major and the Minors, also local favorites who are currently entertaining evenings at Landers Chalet in Elk Grove Village, will perform Thursday. Next Friday the Oscar Lindsay Trio will belt out blues and jazz.

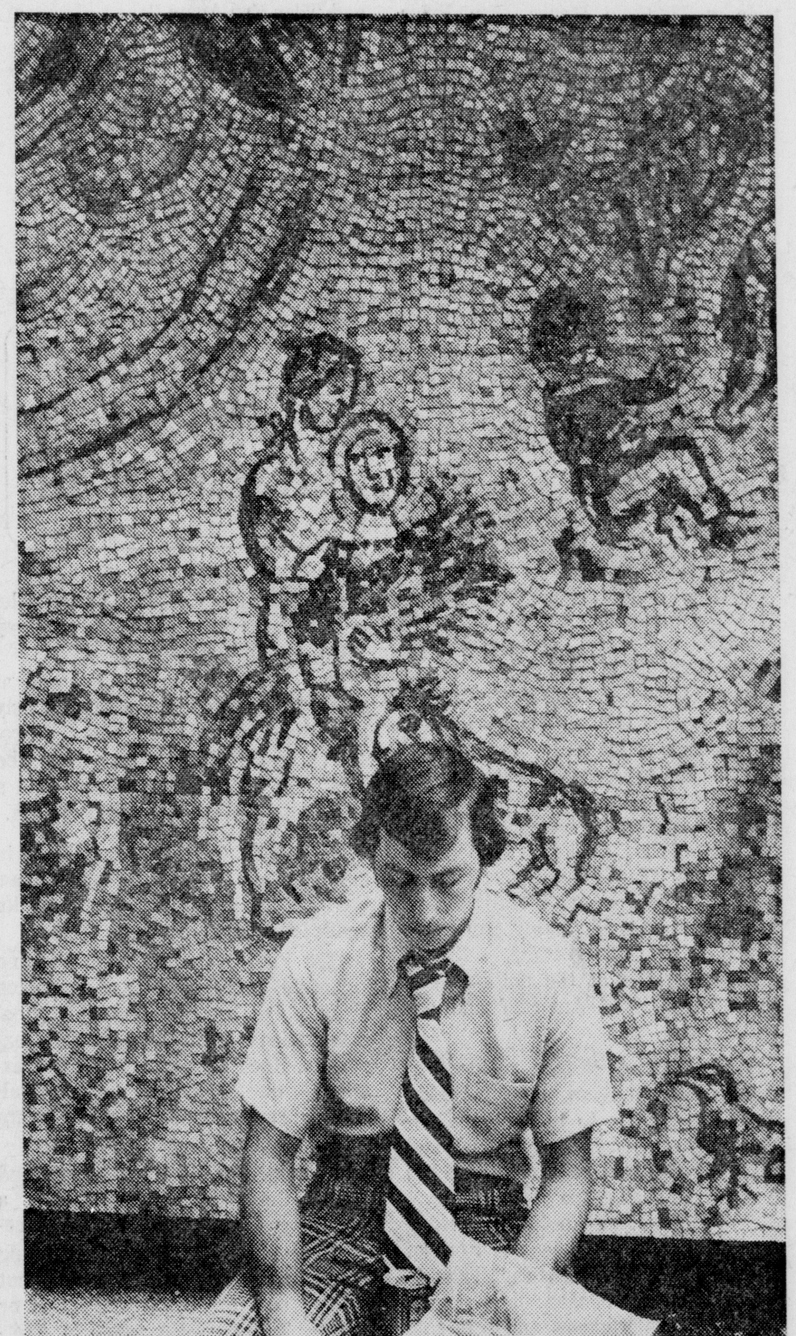

And if you're free today or planned to do some shopping downtown anyhow, take a break. Bunky Green and the Chicago State University Jazz Ensemble are performing.

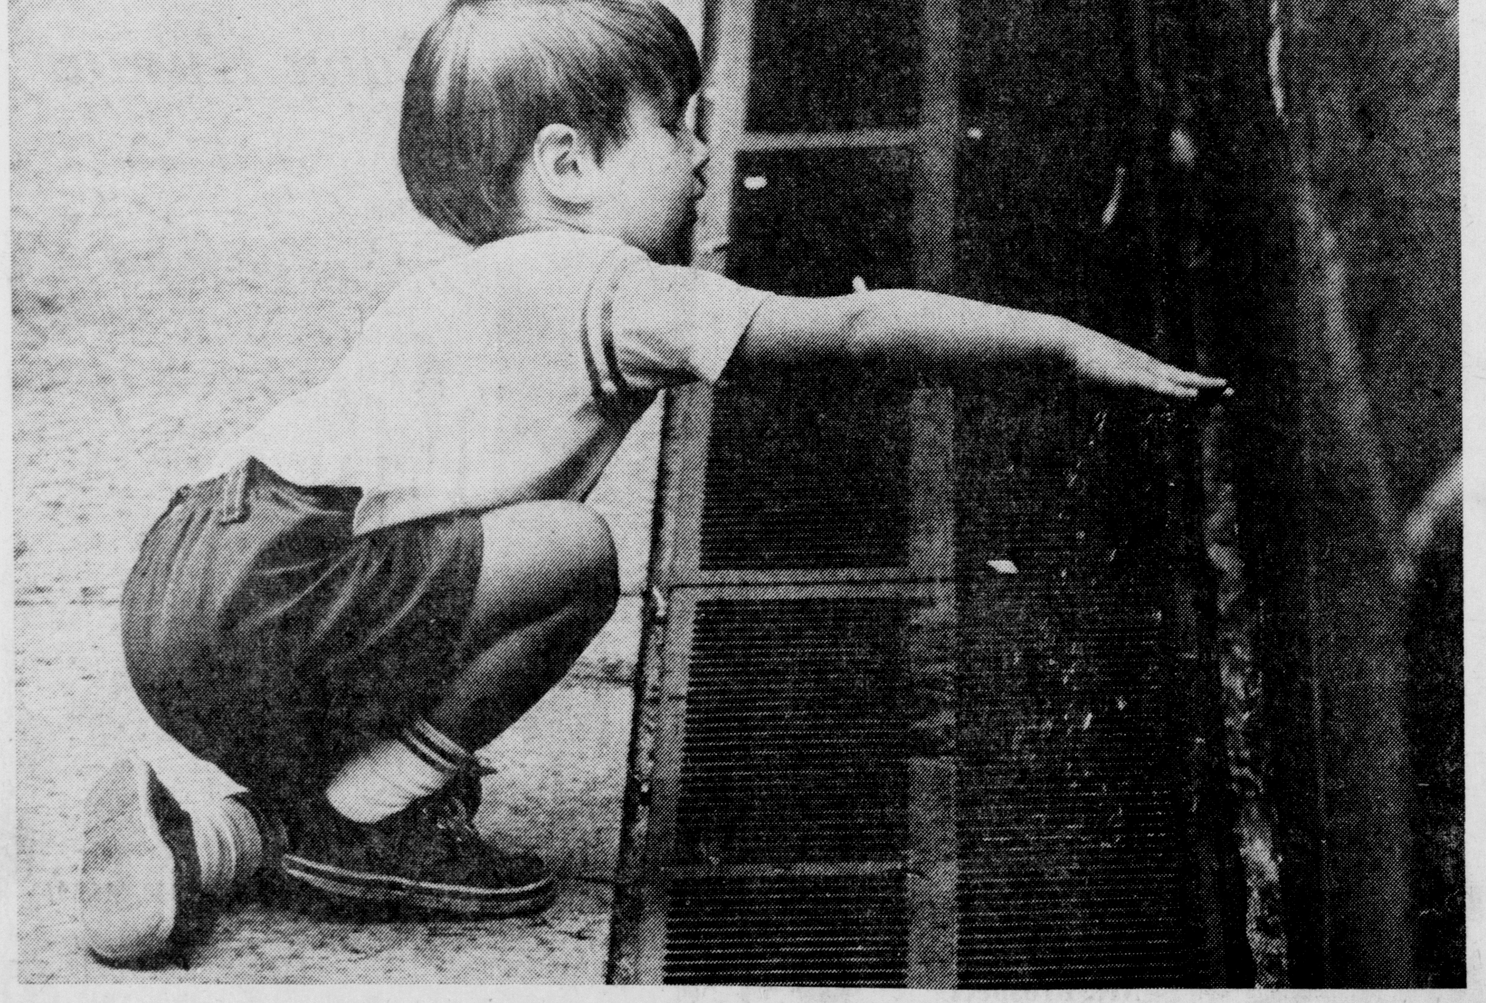

TO REACH First National Plaza from the Northwest suburbs take the Kennedy Expressway, exit at Monroe Street and head east to the lake.

All scheduled entertainment is subject to change. Further information and new listings are available through 732-4793.

The entertainment policy will continue at the Plaza through October . . . as long as the weather holds out.

Stewart's newest album a change—not all good

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

Rod Stewart's "Atlantic Crossing" album (Warner Bros. records) is a change in many ways. The first for a new record company, it also is his first album recorded in the United States and his first recorded without any members of the Faces, his usual band.

Not all the changes are good, however. For the musicians on the album, Stewart and producer Tom Dowd have chosen the Muscle Shores rhythm section. They are overly competent, compared with the occasional shambles the Faces make in their very loose manner.

But the album lacks the good party-feel of Stewart's previous solo efforts. Even his signing is more conforming, less distinctive.

All of this brings more attention to the songs, and they do not hold up as well as in the past, particularly on the "fast side" where four of Stewart's own five songs are found. Often on this side, too, Stewart sounds as if he is singing from a different, more distant room than is the band.

It is the "slow side" which saves the album. Only the one Stewart song is weak. For the rest, Stewart can be heard and does a better singing job. He doesn't have to battle with the arrangements, either. The best is his closing version of the Sutherland Bros. and Quiver's "Sailing."

Other new releases include:

"Jamaica Say You Will" by Joe Cocker (A&M). Another of rock's finer voices moves surely through a collection of ballads, rock and blues. With this album and last year's "I Can Stand a Little Rain" (also A&M) Cocker seems back in a good musical groove.

Five of the songs are by backup singers Matthew Moore, Jim Price (who also produces and handles the arrangements) and Daniel Moore. All three were with Cocker on the celebrated Mad Dogs and Englishmen tour of 1970. Also prominent on the album are Jim Horn's sax and Richard Tee's organ work.

My favorite songs are the emotion-laden ballads (Cocker's strong point) "If I Love You" and "Where Am I Now," also a nice version of Randy Newman's "I Think It's Going to Rain Today."

"E. C. WAS HERE" by Eric Clapton (RSO). This is the album Clapton's old-time fans have been waiting for. Culled live from his recent tour around the world, it highlights Clapton as a blues singer and guitar player, with plenty of long, flashy guitar solos.

Highlights include vocal duets with Yvonne Elliman on two Blind Faith songs, "Presence of the Lord" and "Can't Find My Way Home," and versions of Bobby Blue Bland classics, "Drifting Blues" and "Farther On Up the Road."

"Why Can't We Be Friends" by War (United Artists). Skillfully mixing Latin, soul, rock and jazz sounds as always, War again proves its tremendous versatility as well as its ability to make good music. There are ballads like "Lotus Blossum," jazzy upbeat songs like "Don't Let Nobody Get You Down" and funk like "Low Rider." The title song is among the band's most infectious — a sure-fire party favorite.

"Slade in Flame" by Slade (Warner Bros.). This movie soundtrack shows that Slade, whom I've compared in the past to the early Rolling Stones, also contains the potential for growth. The opening "How Does It Feel?" has a softer sound than the band's usual hard-rock, assault fare and is lyrically much more sophisticated than the bulk of the group's work. The addition of a horn section on several cuts is also a plus. Two other good songs are "Standin' on the Corner" and "Far Far Away."

Poet goes from reciting poetry to publishing it

'TO HERE BACK AND BEYOND"

by Robert Strom
The Other Door
Printing and Publishing Co., $1.25

Robert Strom used to be content just reciting poetry, entertaining family and friends, patrons in coffee houses and children in the classroom.

He was good at Carl Sandburg, great at Kahlil Gibron. He even had the Book of Genesis down pat in case he got a request.

Now Strom, a plumber by trade, can add some other published lines to his repertoire: his own. "To Here and Beyond" is a clever little book. In it Strom writes about loneliness and love, separations and dreams.

Much of the material is political satire like "Towers of Power" about the fall of Spiro Agnew and Richard Nixon. Out of a hitchiking trip came "Tell It Like It Is Baby, 1973," a serious glimpse at the political and social turmoil of America and the world.

STROM IS A former resident of Schaumburg and now lives in Rockford. His goal is to travel on a national tour, sponsored by a national association, to give recitations in classrooms around the country.

"I want to represent the working man with honor," he says and one of his poems, "The Boomers," is dedicated to his kind of man:

"Plumbers, welders and fitters
gathered in a task to be done
Caterpillar had ordered a new building
Natkin the prime contract had won.
As we labored the words of Winston Churchill resounded in our ears
For all he had ever promised was, 'Blood, sweat and tears.' "

"THE YEAR OF THE POLAR BEAR"

by Thomas J. Koch
Bobbs-Merrill, $8.95

Don't be mislead by the picture of the fluffy white mass on the back-cover of Thomas J. Koch's "The Year of the Polar Bear." It's a stark story of Arctic survival.

The book presents a collection of incidents in the life of the King of the Cold. Starting at birth, when the cubs begin to feed off their hibernating mother, the story depicts various elements of the life of the bear as they grow into maturity.

The description is detailed and at times violently vivid, which obviously represents the several years of research Koch did in preparing the book. The polar bears, a male and a female cub, are the stars of the book.

THE ONLY HUMANS mentioned in the book are a group of anonymous Eskimos who stalk the great white bears for food and furs.

"The Year of the Polar Bear" is no kid's tale. It is a mixture of anecdotes about polar bear life and historical observations about the bears by explorers. Koch tells the reader, for example, that someone named Calpurnius reported seeing white bears attack seals way back in 57 A.D.

But despite all of the research and details, the story drags. Hardly a chapter goes by without a tedious refrain about the bears pounding through some thin ice den to pluck out a baby seal for breakfast, lunch or dinner. Those scenes seem to alternate with others of the bear eating snow or foraging for roots and berries.

UNLESS THE reader has an overriding interest in the dietetic habits of the polar bear, things can be a little slow.

Apparently the author lacked sufficient material to write a lengthy book. The result is that the relatively thin (150-pages) volume is repetitive.

If there is one lesson that might be learned from "The Year of the Polar Bear," it might be that except for eating, wandering across frozen wastelands and sleeping, a polar bear's life is pretty dull.

The Junior Museum of The Art Institute of Chicago is the first children's museum in the country to celebrate the Bicentennial with a major exhibition. The exhibit, "America and the Artist," opened Aug. 1 in Hammerman Gallery and will continue for two years. It explores the wide range of artistic creation in America and the rich diversity of the men and women who have been its creators by focusing on 19 objects from the permanent collection ranging from a silver milk pot by Paul Revere to the model for Calder's Chicago "Flamingo."

Introductory wall labels help to illustrate the heterogeneity of America's artists with comments by many of the artists about their own work. For example: "I prefer every time a picture composed and painted out of doors." (Winslow Homer); "The problem is to seize the glimpse." (Robert Motherwell); "Everything I do is completely original — I made it up when I was a little kid." (Claes Oldenburg); "In some works it is my intention to develop the kind of forms nature might create if only heat and steel were available to her." (Richard Hunt).

Portraits and short biographies also introduce the artists. Oldenburg and Hunt are both former students of the School of the Art Institute.

Visitors are invited to participate by spotting the three works not by Oldenburg in a large group of reproductions; turning a wheel to match portraits of the Stieglitz circle of artists with reproductions of their work; and comparing Revere's diagram of the Boston Massacre with a color reproduction of his famous engraving.

Redgrave tops in role changing

by GENIE CAMPBELL
(A review)

Lynn Redgrave has played such a variety of character roles during her career, from Georgy in "Georgy Girl" to Xaviera Hollander in the movie version of "The Happy Hooker," that it was most difficult to predict whom she would portray in "The Two of Us."

Already forewarned the play is made up of four seperate one-acts, we naturally expected more than one personality to emerge. Yet in one scenario alone, Miss Redgrave plays three roles, managing to do so with a switch of wigs, costumes, mannerisms and dictions that is fascinating to watch.

MODERN, UNUSUAL in style, "The Two of Us" is primarily just for fun and laughs. Yet playwright Michael Frayn has also subtly incorporated within each playlet, a different, very typical life experience. And if you're unable to readily identify with the first, just relax. You have three more to go.

In addition to subject matter, Frayn whets the appetites of theatergoers by offering them a little of everything . . . situation comedy, outright farce and even some strong drama.

Naturally Miss Redgrave has no trouble carrying any one of the roles or forms of acting. Nor do her leading men, David Leary, Roy London and John Tillinger, who take turns playing opposite her in each vignette. Never are there more than two actors on stage during any one of the separate scenes.

THE FIRST playlet is about a young couple who attempt to take a second honeymoon with their infant son in tow. Naturally the baby doesn't give them a moment's rest and the two typically bicker and argue and go at each other until they finally begin to wonder what they had to argue about before he came along. It's a never ending cycle as Frayn points out.

Then we jump to a single woman's apartment in Greenwich Village. It's the morning after a wild party and Miss Redgrave as Gina realizes she has a new roommate she doesn't really remember bringing home the night before. Roy London shares the limelight in this one and he does a terrific job in convincing Gina "how things aren't what they seem to be. What you want is really what you don't want and not to have what you want proves you've got what you want after all."

FROM A YOUNG mother to a New York single Lynn Redgrave returns on stage after intermission as a socialite throwing an intimate dinner party for several of her friends. Only a last minute unexpected guest throws the whole evening into a shambles. Though we never see more than Lynn and John Tillinger on stage together, we eventually meet almost everyone of the dinner guests in a masked charade highlighted by quick exits and plenty of door slamming.

The final one-act is by far the most dramatic with Miss Redgrave featured in almost a monologue as a disillusioned middle-aged housewife who acts out her fantasies and frustrations while her husband who never listens, simply passes them off as her little muddles.

Miss Redgrave is directed by her husband, John Clark. The play is here through Sunday, only.

Lions bring rodeo to area

A gold giveaway, a performance by the country western group Cactus Jack and an appearance by WMAQ radio personalities are special attractions for the second annual Lions Bronco Championship Rodeo this weekend at Langendorf Park, Barrington.

Performances are at 7:30 tonight and Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday. Proceeds of the tickets, $3.50 for adults and $2.25 for students under 18 and senior citizens, go to Good Shepherd Hospital and the Lions blind charities.

Each show includes five major events: bareback riding, calf roping, saddle bronc riding, steer wrestling and bull riding.

TONIGHT ONLY, Cactus Jack will perform with WMAQ morning disc jockey Bill Coffey. Tonight and Saturday WMAQ personalities will compete in calf roping.

At all three performances, WMAQ personality Ellie Dylan will reign as Rodeo Queen and give away WMAQ belt buckles plus one piece of gold bullion.

Rodeo information is available at 381-5940.

'Drunkard' staged this weekend

The Hoffman Estates Bicentennial Committee will sponsor a play, "The Drunkard," Saturday and Sunday at the Vogelei Barn, 650 W. Higgins Rd. The play will be performed by the Country Players, a theater group from the Hoffman Estates and Barrington areas.

Performances will be given at 8 p.m. both days. Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Prior to performances, a skit, "The History of Our Flag," will be presented by Boy Scout Pack 97.

The play, originally produced in 1844, is a musical parody which was billed at the time as a "temperance teaching" melodrama.

Director is Jack Martens, and producer is Bill McNamara.

Prevention is best cure to stop stealing of art

Art theft has become a problem for private collectors as well as museums and galleries, says Ronald R. Schmidt, director of security for a private security company.

Schmidt says Uniform Crime Reports published by the Federal Bureau of Investigation showed a 17 per cent increase in property crime last year. He has these suggestions for both public and private owners of valuable art:

• Install proper lighting on the grounds outside your house. Light is a deterrent to housebreakers.

• Use ornamental iron on windows, especially rear windows, where a break in is most apt to occur. But be sure the gratings conform to local fire codes.

• A local alarm system that sounds a siren or bells effectively scares away marauders in populated areas, but the best alarm elsewhere is one that signals a central station or the police.

• Improve the general physical security of your home. Install dead-bolt locks on doors to make it harder for thieves to enter.

• For a large public reception at home, hire plain clothes security personnel to watch for attempted theft.

Schmidt said some dealers, galleries and private collectors innocently encourage art theft by permitting their agents to negotiate the return of stolen objects with no questions asked.

"When parties negotiate and pay for stolen art, they provide a built-in market and thereby encourage thieves to steal more," he said.

'Praise of Love' returns Tuesday

"IN PRAISE OF LOVE," Terence Rattigan's new play that reopened Arlington Park Theatre last week, is a beautiful love story, tragic and witty and most of all, very, very moving.

Unfortunately it played only five days and most people didn't hear soon enough to make plans to see it.

This week producer and managing director DAVID LONN announced "In Praise of Love" will be returning on Tuesday for an additional two weeks through Sept. 21.

One can't praise this show enough, both for the brilliancy of the work itself and the fine performances by TAMMY GRIMES and MICHAEL ALLINSON, who play the leading roles of man and wife.

Set in a London flat, the story concerns a middle-aged couple who through the years have well worn the marriage groove, taking each other more or less for granted. But then a terminal illness for one makes each reconsider their relationship, quietly covet the other's companionship.

But this is no syrupy soap opera, not with Rattigan writing the dialog. He continually buffets the theatergoer from laughs to tears with a bombardment of amusing lines and situations to ease the blow of each emotional one. To be sure, "In Praise of Love" is as gleeful as it is tragic.

Yet Rattigan also knows when to pull the final punch and he does so with no after thought, leaving the audience almost breathless.

Without the rave performances by Miss Grimes and Allison, who carefully define the personalities so meaningful to the production, "In Praise of Love" would go unnoticed. Intimacy is even further enhanced by seeing this play in-the-round.

Completing the cast, and doing their share to make the show successful are SAM GRAY and GARY TOMLIN. The effective setting and lighting are by NEIL PETER JAMPOLIS and superb direction is attributed to MICHAEL BAWTREE.

DAN FIGLEY got tired of being constantly on the road, playing and singing with various combos. So he came back to the Chicago area and formed his own group, WILDFIRE.

Consisting of five other musicians besides himself, the new group is currently the featured combo at ALLGAUER'S FIRESIDE LOUNGE in Northbrook.

From the opening number "I Love You Today More Than Yesterday," their combined sound packs a powerful punch, drawing from a variety of instruments including organ, piano, drums, guitar, trumpet and sax with a flute thrown in during instrumentals.

Producing good, light rock to popular tunes and some "oldies but goodies," the Wildfire definitely have a sound to sell, but they need to develop charisma to match it. Their shows appear more like dance sets with one selection backed up to the next.

BILL AMBROSINI on drums breaks the ice. With a fluorescent light aimed at him, his sticks actually glow in the dark during one animated solo, and TONY PETTINATTO manages to really let loose on the trumpet. But to distinguish themselves even more the group must develop together a style of their own.

But Wildfire is young. The six have only been together 14 weeks. Leastwise they've got a talented crew which also includes STAN TUMA, MITCH ZIMMER and GENE SMALLEY. Wildfire is at Allgauer's through September 27.

Actor no sissy though he plays a sob sister

by GAY PAULEY

Don't ever call Broadway's Michael O'Haughey a sissy. You just might get kicked in the teeth with the same athletic prowess that made him a professional soccer player.

Know also that he's a weight lifter.

O'Haughey, in his first Broadway appearance, has the role of the singing sob sister-reporter in the hit musical "Chicago." For a while, in the show's early days, he-man O'Haughey was billed simply as M. instead of Michael because of the need to hide his identity in the loosely knit plot.

Through most of the show he is in female attire, singing soprano, but close to the end he's suddenly unmasked by another actor who comments that, "Things are not always what they seem."

O'HAUGHEY THEN marches offstage in trunks, flexing his muscles. from my trunks to my knees, and bare from there on down. I did make a funny sight."

O'Haughey went to the makeup experts at the Metropolitan Opera Co., to have his face made to look feminine. The makeup artist had to narrow his "fairly broad face, rub out some of my eyebrows." They also put him in an auburn-blonde wig, lighter than his natural deep reddish-brown shade.

But once he got the part, most problems were over. The costume department from "Chicago" made his dresses padded in the proper places and the big floppy-brimmed hats of the 1920s era in which the show is set.

One of the things he also had to develop was the character, so that he didn't simply become a female impersonator.

"I've read a lot of psychology," he said. "you can get into a character because of your reading. I flew my sister and brother-in-law in from South Africa. They were pleased I played the role for real instead of as a campy character.

"AUDIENCES LAUGH with me, not at me."

O'Haughey was born in Pretoria in 1947. Both sides of his family had migrated to South Africa from Counties Cork and Wicklow in Ireland.

He began studying for the priesthood and missionary work, but his father, an electrical engineer, was in an accident which caused massive crippling and years to recover. O'Haughey, to support his family, left the monastery and went into business, ultimately becoming manager of one of Pretoria's largest department stores.

He also found time for soccer, and for seven years was center forward on the Arcadia United team, playing all over South Africa. He lifts weights for fitness, and now has turned to tennis and swimming because they're easier to play in the United States than soccer.

His introduction to the world of entertainment began when he sang a role from "Carmen" in a pantomime as a favor for a friend. Those who heard his phenomenal voice — from deep bass to tenor and on up to soprano without going falsetto — urged him to go into show business and to the United States.

HIS VOICE IS a "natural," say teachers and doctors who've examined his larynx, and he's never had vocal lessons. He and the girl he dates, singer Anne Ault, developed a nightclub act and were steadily at work until he went on Broadway. She is seen by millions in television commercials.

O'Haughey said he's "done what I can" with the one role "and now I have to advance more, eventually. Anne and I probably will work out some new club acts."

(United Press International)

Michael O'Haughey

But by now, the actor said, most people know that a man is playing the Mary Sunshine role, so he doesn't mind talking about some of the problems it created, even as it brought him instant success.

O'Haughey (pronounced O-Hockey), born in South Africa of Irish descent, still laughs about shopping for clothes for auditions. First off, he is 5-foot-11 and weighs 172 pounds, "fairly big for a woman."

"I had to go all over New York looking for clothes," said the actor. "I finally went to a shop specializing in apparel for large women. I take a size 18 or 20 dress. I had to get special permission from the manager to try anything on. They even have large size shoes. I use the slip-ons.

"Fortunately, my legs are fairly thin, even though I play soccer. I remember having shaved to the knees for the auditions, and then, in a break before the show opened, I took a holiday in Puerto Rico.

I FORGOT, and there I was one day on the beach with this mat of hair

Among the best landscape investments are evergreens. Whatever your budget allows there are evergreens that won't stretch the budget to extremes. They come in so many shapes and sizes that there just isn't a landscape need that can't be filled with an evergreen. They are long lasting, easy to care for and have the beautiful virtue of retaining their color all through the year. With all those attributes it's hard to imagine any landscape without them. If you aren't already a proud owner of evergreens become one now for this is a "just right" time to plant them.

Before you jump the gun and rush out to buy evergreens there are things to consider. What size and shape do you need and what is its purpose. There are six basic shapes and within those are some offshoots. Very familiar is the broad pyramidal that is the year around Christmas tree. These will grow from 20 to 50 feet high and have quite a wide spread. These are beautiful as specimens, that is, standing alone with a dramatic impact. Favorites in this group are the Colorado Blue Spruces that, in addition to beautiful form, have blue foliage that is distinctive in summer and breath-taking against the snow in winter.

Then there is the narrow pyramidal that grows from 12 feet on up and doesn't need as much spreading room as the broad types. These are good as specimens or planted in a row for a windbreak or screen. The columnar types are evergreens that grow even narrower and not so tall. These can be trimmed easily and are excellent for thick screens and hedging that will stay green all winter. In this group are Arborvitaes and Junipers. Both of these are hardy and, best of all, give a lot for the money. In this group are also some that are called upright mounds.

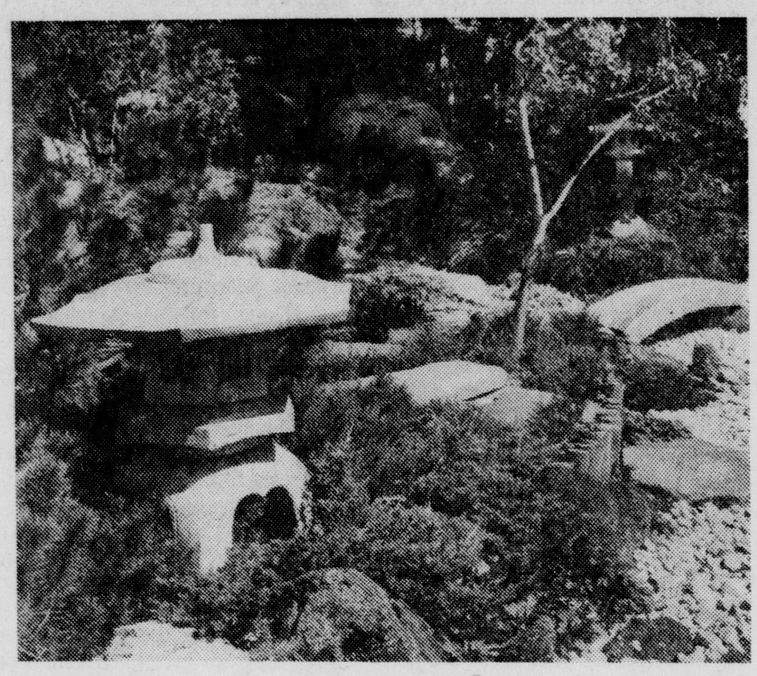

The round or globe types are outstanding to set off an entrance or to soften a corner. A favorite in this group is the Mugho Pine. This one has bright green color and gives whatever spot it is in the look of a Japanese garden. The spreading shrubs are versatile — they grow from two to five feet tall and they make excellent screens or hedges for they form an impenetrable barrier. Plant one of them or a group for specimens and they are perfect as foundation plantings. Among good ones are Junipers and Spreading Yews. The amount of sun available is an important consideration, so if your planting spot isn't blessed with much sun you should put Yews on your list.

Evergreens don't usually get much thought as ground covers but some varieties are valuable where grass is a problem. Choose one that is tolerant of light shade to plant under a tree, or they will grow on a hill and stop erosion. They will grow from three to 30 inches tall and given time can fill pretty good sized areas. Don't plant them where you will want walking space. A good one to look at is the Andorra Compacta that grows to about eight inches tall with a three-four foot spread. A special beauty of this one is that its feathery growth turns from green to purple in winter. Many of the spreaders are very effective when cascading over rocks or rail ties.

In addition to these basic groups are weeping types and sculptured or topiary evergreens. The shaped evergreens come in a variety of unusual shapes that are oriental in appearance and don't require much space. There are few landscape things that will be more admired or cause more conversation. These are the evergreens so beloved by the Japanese who have made the topiary plant a real art form.

Another virtue of evergreens is that if the space you have for landscaping is limited there are many in the evergreen family that come in dwarf varieties. These have all the beauty and hardiness of full size plants so how you landscape is limited only by your creativity.

Earlier in this article it said this is the "just-right" time to plant. True. The ground is workable so the planting hole can be dug with a minimum of effort. More important is that an evergreen planted now will be able to establish its roots to withstand winter and next spring will be ready to burst into growth. That you will have color all winter is another big plus. A word of caution — when you buy an evergreen be sure it is one grown in this climate. Many evergreens are grown in warmer areas, shipped here for selling and come the harsh winter where they don't have the stamina to survive.

CASCADING evergreens will add beauty to your landscape. Now's the time to think about planting your evergreen trees for beauty next spring.

Winterize your garden

Before the snow starts to fly, and while we still have some nice weather, the garden should be put into shape for winter says James E. Schuster, Horticulture Extension Adviser at the DuPage County Cooperative Extension Service.

Tender bulbs such as dahlias, cannas and caladiums should have been dug before the first freeze, or when the tops died down naturally. Let the soil dry on the bulbs and then shake it off. Dust the bulbs with Captan and store in flats of dry sand or vermiculite at 40 to 50 degrees Fahrenheit.

Dig tuberous begonias and gladiolus when the tops have died back. Cut the tops to about three inches and dry the bulbs for several days. Remove the dried stems if they haven't fallen off, dust the bulbs and store in open mesh bags.

Geraniums, coleus, begonia and other annuals need to be brought in before a killing frost. Entire plants can be dug, potted and brought in if you have a well lighted area in which to keep them. With artificial light these plants can be kept blooming all winter.

If space is a problem, take cuttings from the plants outdoors before frost, root in either water or flats of sand and peat, and pot up in 2¼ inch pots. Keep in a cool, bright spot until planting out time next year.

Hybrid tea roses are not completely hardy here, not because they can't stand the cold, but because of the changeable weather. In getting rose plants ready for winter, remember that the system should be designed, not to keep the plants warm, but to keep them frozen all winter.

When the leaves have dropped, cut back the canes so that winter winds will not whip them around. Dust the soil and plant with Phaltan and hill the soil up about a foot on the canes. When the soil freezes hard, mulch with straw, leaf mold or any other material available. Hold the mulch in place with wire fence or rose cones with holes in them for ventilation, says Schuster.

And before you forget it, walk through your garden. Make a complete list of successes and failures and write down suggestions for next season. If you are like most of us, unless they are written down, the best ideas will be forgotten by the first warm days next spring.

The 'utmost' turf

Do you want a lawn even more exquisite than a golf green? If so, take a good look at Kingstown velvet bentgrass. Of course you will have to give it "bentgrass care," — primarily very low mowing, no less frequently than every other day during the growing season. And it may need a bit of pampering, too, so far as pH (it likes acid soils), watering and fertilization are concerned. As we have said before, a Kingstown velvet bentgrass lawn, like a Rolls Royce, may not be for everyone, but no turf is more exquisite for those who want a nonpareil.

Pick vegetables at peak time

To get that fresh picked right to the kitchen stove flavor, it is important to harvest your vegetables at the right time.

Certain vegetables can be picked at any stage of their growth. Others, those that do not have the desired taste or texture when underripe or overripe, must be picked at an exact time in their development.

By following a few simple harvesting rules, the vegetables you have grown with labor and care can end up on your table at the peak of perfection — far tastier than any bought at the store.

Here are some suggestions on harvesting major garden vegetables.

Asparagus. Do not harvest asparagus until the third year that it is in your garden. Asparagus spears are ready to harvest when they are six to eight inches long.

Beans. Harvest snap beans when the pods are young and succulent. Lima beans harvested for green limas should be picked when seeds are nearly full size, just before turning white. For dry beans, let the pods mature on the plants, but harvest before they get so dry that they shatter.

Beets. For good quality, harvest beets when they are 1½ inches or less in diameter.

Cabbage. Cabbage heads should be harvested when they are firm.

Carrots. Carrots can be used before they attain full size. For fresh use, harvest before they exceed one inch in diameter. Larger roots are good for canning and storage.

Corn. For sweet, plump kernels, pick sweet corn when it is in the milk stage, when the juice in the kernel appears milky when punctured. Other signs that corn is almost ready for harvest are drying of the silks, fullness of the tip kernels and firmness of the unhusked ear.

Cucumbers. Cucumbers can be harvested at almost any stage of development before they turn yellow.

Eggplant. Harvest the fruits while they still are glossy.

Lettuce. Harvest when lettuce leaves are large enough to use.

Muskmelons (cantaloupes). Harvest these melons when they are easily separated from the stem.

Onions. Green bunching onions are ready to pick six to eight weeks after planting. Dry onions take two to four months.

Peas. Peas must be checked regularly for maturity. Pick the pods when they are green and before peas begin to harden.

Peppers. Harvest the pepper fruits when they are firm.

Potatoes. Potatoes are harvested after the vines have died.

Pumpkins. Allow pumpkins to mature on the vine but harvest them with stems attached before the first severe freeze.

Radishes. Pull radishes before hot weather sets in, when they reach a usable size. Large radishes become pithy.

Rhubarb. Rhubarb should not be harvested the first year, the second year it should be harvested for only a few weeks. Thereafter, it can be harvested each year for eight to ten weeks.

Spinach. Harvest spinach when leaves are large enough to use.

Squash. Squash varieties are divided into three classes: summer, fall and winter. Use summer squashes when they are young and tender with rind easily penetrated by a thumbnail. The fall and winter varieties have a hard rind, are harvested when mature and are good for storage.

Tomatoes. Harvest the fruits when they are pink. At temperatures over 70 degrees F. pick fruits just as they are turning color and keep them at 68 degrees for further coloring. In the fall, before the first frost, pick remaining fruits and ripen in a dark area at 60 degrees to 70 degrees F.

Protect your driveway

If you've never thought about protection for your driveway, you can probably observe the results of your neglect. Tar base driveway coatings protect bituminous driveways and parking lots against the damaging effects of sun, rain and freezing weather. These coatings also help safeguard your driveway against damage from spilled gasoline, oil and anti-freeze.

Available in ready-to-use form, driveway coatings add years of service to bituminous surfaces. It makes them easier to clean and seals out moisture and frost. It forms a durable, tough shield which insures against deterioration.

Keep in mind that the surface to be coated must be clean. Remove all dust, dirt, oil and grease by scrubbing with a household detergent and then rinsing with water. When the surface is dry, fill any large cracks or potholes with a special filler)driveway coatings usually will not seal cracks larger than hairline size). Allow the surface to dry for a few days before applying the coating. Be sure and follow all label applications directions exactly.

It's time to end summer vacation

by BILL MEACHEM

Before too long the nights will start to get cooler and you will want to bring in those house plants that were spending a summer vacation outdoors.

The plants that I put outdoors fare their best during the summer outside. I don't give them full sun all day, but they do have a spot where they get good light and protection.

One of my favorites is the wax begonia. Not only does it flower profusely outside, but even the foliage takes on a different color. Quite often I will see a lot more pigmentation in the leaves. This is a result of its getting more light than it does indoors.

Those house plants that were left in pots and plunged in the ground were twisted a quarter turn every week. There are two reasons for this. The first is to keep the plants shaped properly. If not turned they could quite possibly become one-sided.

The second reason may seem a little hard on the plant but it isn't. This is to break off any roots that may have found their way through the drainage hole in the bottom. If too many roots grow through the hole it could harm the plant when the pot is removed and brought back inside. Twisting off the roots as they form keeps the main roots inside the pot.

A good time to repot plants is just before bringing them back inside.

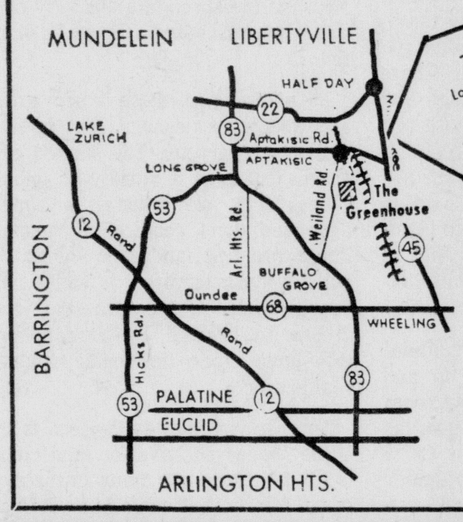

When repotting, remember the few simple rules. First, repot in a pot that is only an inch or so larger than the old pot. If the new pot is too large for the plant, it just doesn't seem to grow well.

Also put drainage in the bottom of the pot. A handful of large gravel works fine. This prevents the drainage hole from becoming clogged.

As for soil, equal parts of sterile packaged potting soil, peatmoss and vermiculite works great. With this mixture you know you are not introducing new diseases and insects.

But take an extra precaution. Before potting, spray the soil. And of course spray the plants before bringing them back indoors, whether you repotted them or not.

THE ORIENTAL art of vegetable cookery is coming into its own with the American homemaker. As a result, Oriental vagetable gardens are flourishing — with unusual vegetables such as Chinese Cabbage, edible pea pods, white radish and bitter melon among others.

Cook, grow vegetables Oriental-style

As the delights of Oriental cuisine become increasingly popular with the American homemaker, the gentle art of vegetable cookery is coming into its own. As a result, unusual vegetable gardens are flourishing across the country.

Fresh, tender and flavorsome vegetables are at the heart of good vegetable cooking, Oriental-style. And what better assurance than to raise them in your own garden?

When you grow Oriental vegetables, you can have new, different and appetizing surprises for the family — in appetizers, salads, vegetable dishes, even as separate courses or in full meatless meals.

In contrast to the matter-of-fact approach to vegetable cooking taken by most Americans, the Chinese and Japanese have great regard for vegetables and have evolved ways of preparing them with appeal, care and flair. The Oriental emphasis is to bring out the delicate flavor of each individual vegetable by Wok cooking in a little oil, by steaming, or by using just a little liquid.

There's a wide selection of Oriental vegetables you can grow, including mustard cabbage, soybean sprouts, Chinese Cabbage, edible pea pods, celery cabbage, water chestnuts, Chinese parsley, white radish and bitter melon — just to name a few.

Consider raising Chinese or celery cabbage and edible podded sugar peas — as two good examples.

Hybrid Chinese cabbage is considered an excellent choice for home gardeners, grown either as a spring or fall crop. It has a spicy flavor, and a short broad shape. In planting, tuck the seeds about one-half inch deep, about eight to 16 seeds per foot. Leave 10 to 12 inches between the plants, and 18 to 24 inches between the rows.

Celery cabbage, tall or short, has a delicate tartness and celery crunch that is appealing in both Oriental and Occidental dishes. Include it in a sukiyaki platter or Chinese stir-fry mixtures. Or cut it in wedges or slices and steam it, then serve it buttered or topped with sour cream. Or shred it for a coleslaw salad."

Edible-podded sugar peas (a special treat flash fried with sliced pork or beef) also can be planted either in spring or fall. It's best to pick these peas when very young, just as the peas begin to form. Although you can eat the peas shelled at later stages, you won't be able to take advantage of the pods.

The young pea pods are delicious stir-fried in a Wok. You can use them in mixed vegetable dishes, in salads after they have cooled or as garnishes from both meat and fish dishes.

In preparing Oriental vegetables, the Wok is a critical tool — and it's also fun and fast. Vegetables which are stir or flash fried in a Wok cook very quickly, with just a little oil in the lower portion of the Wok.

But the Wok also can be used for a variety of cooking purposes: for parboiling, simmering, braising, deep-fat frying, and steaming.

When you stir-fry vegetables, remember that cutting and assembling the vegetables in advance is important. Vegetables that are more thinly sliced or sliced on the diagonal will cook more quickly. And faster cooking vegetables, of course should go in last.

The secret to this centuries-old Oriental cooking technique is advance preparation and understanding its rules. The method is similar to sauteing, but faster and truly exciting. The ingredients are precisely sliced, diced, or minced, then tossed vigorously at a very high temperature in a small amount of oil. The hot oil seals in the juices and flavor and the fast cooking retains color and texture.

No matter what vegetables you're preparing in a Wok, remember the timing really makes a difference. Each vegetable should be added separately and in sequence so that all are properly cooked at the same time. Coordination, timing, a sense of sequence, the right amount of heat — and your Wok-cooked, home-grown vegetables will be a smash success at the family dinner table.

How to deal with weeds

by BILL MEACHEM

In one of my favorite comic strips there's a little boy who grows his weed garden every year. All the other children in the school scoff at his endeavors. I guess we would, too.

We always are striving for a weed-free garden. But exactly what is a weed? The real definition for a weed is, "a plant out of place." This means then, that even the most exotic orchid would be a weed if it were growing in a bed of marigolds. Of course, this is an impossible situation, but I have found some valuable plants among "weeds" in my garden.

For instance, I have some Japanese barberry plants bordering my yard. They belong to my neighbor, but at times I have found some seedling barberries growing among my roses next to the hedge. I guess you technically could call them "weeds," but I have taken some of these seedlings and planted them elsewhere where they have developed into a nice little hedge.

There's another "weed" among my roses that I also am leaving in place. This is a seedling yew. How it got there I do not know. Perhaps it was dropped by a bird. But this is another plant that will be transplanted to another garden spot in a year or two.

You may say that these are the exceptions, and I guess they are. But it only proves that a weed is a plant out of place — it even could be a good plant. Later in the growing season, if you have plants of wax begonia — which, incidentally, is good in both sun and partial shade — you may find a lot of little weeds growing around the base. Look closely. These could be seedling begonias which nature sowed and started for you. Take some and pot them. They will make nice house plants for the winter months.

Weed control is quite an involved science today. We have many ways of keeping them in check. For the most part, weeds are a nuisance and should be removed because they will take both moisture and nutrition from the plants we desire. Sometimes they will choke out good plants with their roots.

The old fashioned way of controlling weeds in a garden is to cultivate. I say old fashioned, but it is still the best in many instances. Lately we have heard a great deal about mulching plants. Mulch is a covering over the soil which allows water to percolate through and provides a shade to keep weed seedlings from growing. Straw, hay and even shredded newspaper make good mulches. Then, you can buy materials like cocoa bean hills, shredded bark and other more decorative materials for mulching.

Hay and straw mulches don't look the best in many places. In the vegetable garden, though, they may make the best mulch because you are not looking for decoration in this part of the garden.

A word of caution about mulching with some of these materials. Under a straw mulch I usually find a lot of sow bugs and slugs, especially during a moist season. These can make a feast of your plants. As a precaution, I will usually spray the soil with rose and flower spray before putting down a mulch.

Another thing that has been reported to me — I don't have the problem — is that mulches of loose material are ideal for mice runs. Now mice are quite destructive to plants in some areas. They will nibble away at bulbs and other plants to their liking. Sometimes the old fashioned methods of cultivating weeds out of the garden can be best.

Actually, weeds grow primarily in the spring. Get rid of them early to avoid trouble. Generally, two or three good weedings or cultivatings is all that you need for the whole season.

Most snakes hatched from eggs

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Christine Velis, 11, of Salt Lake City, Utah, for her question:

DO SNAKES REALLY HAVE LIVE BABIES?

Most snakes lay eggs, but others give birth to live babies. In North America, about 100 of the native snakes bear live babies and about 150 species lay eggs. In other parts of the world, the egg-layers far outnumber the live-bearers.

Our native king snakes and bull snakes, pine snakes and coral snakes all lay eggs. They are pale oval-shape eggs with tough, pliable shells. As a rule, the female lays her brood on the ground and leaves them to hatch in the sand or warm soil. The youngsters are miniature copies of their parents and all ready to go as soon as they shed their shells.

Our native boas, water snakes and garter snakes give birth to live babies. So do our deadly copperheads and water moccasins and all of our poisonous rattlesnakes. In most live-bearing species the infants stay inside the mother's body from four to six months. This gives them plenty of time to develop, and when they emerge the youngsters also are ready to take care of themselves.

When the time comes to give birth, the live-bearing mother snake is restless and irritable. But she settles down as the babies emerge one by one. Each infant snake arrives coiled up and neatly wrapped in a clear membrance, which looks like a plastic bag. It may take 10 minutes to emerge, and the next may begin emerging in just a few seconds.

In some species the mother snake takes a rest after each birth, so complete delivery takes many hours. In some cases the newborn babes break out of their plastic bags within a few minutes. Others wait an hour or even a day or more. The mother shows little or no interest in her offspring. When her delivery duties are done, she may rest awhile. Then she glides away in search of a good dinner. The deserted babies also are hungry, but they are able to find their own food.

In North America we have perhaps 30 different rattlesnakes, ranging from 2 to 7 feet in length. All of them bear live babies, usually in late summer or fall. The tail of each newborn infant ends with a small button. He soon sheds his skin and gains the first section of his rattle. Thereafter a new bony bead is added to the rattle every time he sheds his skin.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Ralph Geraci, 9, of Utica, N. Y., for his question:

WHY DO RAPIDS MAKE THE WATER WHITE?

When you mix soap in the bathtub, it makes a frothy white foam because the lather is made of tiny bubbles filled with air. The special mixture of air and water looks white. A mixture of air and mini-droplets or moisture also looks white. This is why white is the color of morning mists and many clouds. Rapids also are a mixture of air and water.

Naturally, a running river does not use soap to whip up a frothy white lather. As it dashes over the rocks, the splashing water breaks into drops that mix with the air. Some form bubbles that look like soapy white foam. Some form minidroplets that look like a misty white fog.

Be certain to think--and you can make it

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

South wasted no time in the play. He won the first trick with dummy's king of spades and led a diamond. East went right up with the ace and led a second spade.

South's jack fell to West's queen and West cleared the suit. South ran the diamonds. But when he fell back on the heart finesse to try for his ninth trick, West took his king and two more spades to leave South one in the soup.

South was bitter. "Just think," he groaned, "Three out of three cards wrong. Put the ace of diamonds, queen of spades, or king of hearts in the other hand and I would have been home."

"'Just think' is what you should have done," said North. "Had you led dummy's queen of hearts at trick two and let it ride it wouldn't have mattered where those cards were. Your contract would have made easily."

Needless to say, North was right. South had failed to think.

Special takes potshots at hunters

by JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK — "The Guns of Autumn," a CBS Reports special on hunting to be aired tonight, takes aim at hunting and modern "game management" to prove the camera can be almost as deadly a weapon as the rifle.

The program states there are 20 million hunters in the United States and goes on to show some of them going after black bear, birds, deer, buffalo and exotic animals.

The result is a report in blood-curdling living color of the slaughter of wildlife by men and women who do not so much hunt animals as execute them.

True sportsmen among hunters may find "Guns" as graphically horrible as will those who disapprove of the sport.

THE NETWORK already has been under considerable pressure from hunting and gun groups. It has set aside 7-8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 28, to air the controversy that inevitably will follow.

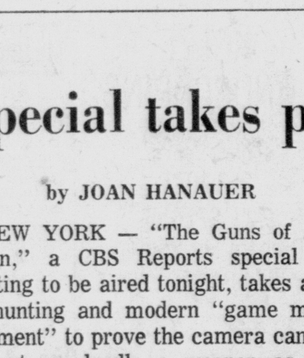

"Guns" is an effective indictment against the modern breed of hunter.

The most appalling shots were at a mile-square fenced-in private game preserve outside Detroit.

The viewer sees a hunter shoot a white fallow deer after paying $425. The animal is wounded, but no one seems able to kill it quickly. They don't want it shot in a way that will spoil the head as a trophy. Their uncaring ineptness is sickening.

One of the men turns to the hunters and says, "Nice shooting. I like how you crippled him, you know, you didn't want to ruin the meat."

Strike threatens two area games; decision today on Elgin's schools

by MIKE KLEIN

The rule of educational logistics states no teachers, no school . . . and no football, either. But there may be a special treat awaiting those fans who are Huskies or Grenadiers.

The quest for a better existence, which found Elgin teachers on strike Thursday, shutting down most schools there, just might cause the classiest throw-together football opener you could imagine.

Hersey's Huskies were set to play at Elgin tonight while Elk Grove's Grenadiers would host Elgin Larkin. But those games being played now has all the certainty of catching a greased piglet.

No final decision is expected until this morning, but you might find Joe Gliwa's Huskies battling Don Schnake's Grenadiers this evening, probably at Elk Grove.

The Huskies and Grenadiers were perennial opponents in the Mid-Suburban League's now defunct Super Bowl, making three straight appearances through 1973. Elk Grove won twice before Hersey succeeded.

There's an Illinois High School Association ruling which comes into action regarding the Elgin situation. Sessions were held earlier this week before teachers manned their picket lines.

Unless Elgin and Elgin Larkin are in session today, there can be no football for either club unless their school board declares both Thursday and today legal school holidays.

Each IHSA member institution is awarded five emergency days which can be spread throughout the school calendar. They're usually reserved for snow.

Fans should contact Hersey and Elk Grove this morning for the latest decision. Or, call the Herald answering service, 394-1700, after noon.

Regardless of their opponent, Elk Grove will honor a beloved man with a special pre-varsity game ceremony. They'll name the football facility "Robert E. Haskell Memorial Stadium."

Haskell served as Elk Grove principal from January, 1967, until last November when he passed away unexpectedly during a hunting expedition.

There should be many exciting moments in this 1975 opening weekend.

Some highlights to watch:

• The developments of Prospect, Schaumburg and St. Viator. Each ballclub looks down the long road to an IHSA playoff appearance in November. Answers to questions posed by coaches Dave Keefe, Bob Ferguson and Jim Lyne will begin falling in place tonight.

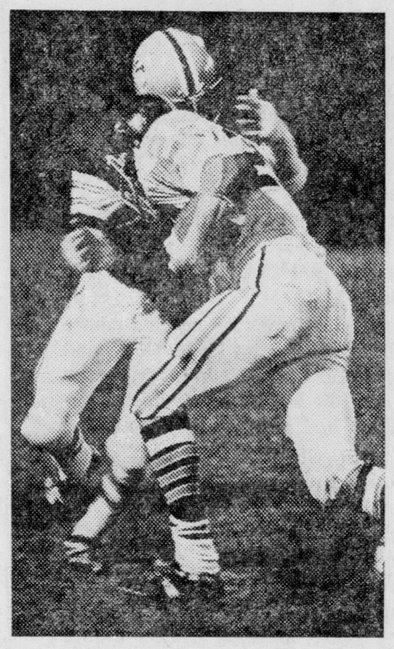

Prospect plays at Maine West where the Warriors promise a strong challenge. Defending MSL champion Schaumburg is a strong favorite at Fremd. And St. Viator will check out Forest View on the Falcons' field.

• Coaches Ferguson of Schaumburg and Joe Samojedny at Fremd coach their first varsity games opposite each other. That's not ordinarily a fact of great merit. But Ferguson and Samojedny spent two years in the same backfield at Westmar College in LeMars, Iowa.

• Wheeling's Gerry Clinnin and Conant's John Ayres will debut their first varsities. Wheeling plays at always-tough Rolling Meadows and Conant hosts Buffalo Grove.

• Not to forget the re-debut of many fine senior players including Buffalo Grove defensive back George Bastable, Forest View quarterback Jim Petran, Hersey quarterback Scott Topczewski, Maine West tailback Scott Unger, Palatine quarterback Mark McCostlin, Prospect running back Don Meyer, Schaumburg quarterback Russ Zonca and St. Viator lineman Scott Zettek.

There might be some All-Staters in that group. Palatine's McCostlin, however, must wait until Saturday when his Pirates debut at Hoffman Estates.

BISON BEN. Junior Ben Orcutt of Buffalo Grove is expected to be one of the area's top running backs this fall. Orcutt, No. 2 scorer and No. 3 rusher in the Mid-Suburban as a sophomore, makes his 1975 debut tonight at Conant.

There is one other Saturday game, Arlington at Homewood-Flossmoor.

The pick of tonight's crop are probably Forest View and St. Viator (which shall be aired over WWMM-FM, 92.7, at 8 p.m.) plus Prospect at Maine West.

Forest View's Fred Lussow breathes enthusiasm when he speaks of opening against the Lions who were 9-2 last year but seek an even better record.

"It's a good game for an opener that will make realists out of our kids right away, regardless of what happens," said Lussow.

"We've got another tough opponent next week (Prospect) so this exposure will show us problems we have to correct."

The Falcons lost receiver Mike Maher to a broken hand this week. But Lussow points to three other talented pass catchers in Jim O'Rourke, Ray Michaelson and Jim Vartanian. Lussow also says the Falcons have learned more offense and defense than any team he's coached at Forest View.

"This is as good a ballclub as we could field right now," Lussow claimed. "I'm satisfied."

One reason, of course, is quarterback Petran who'll likely hold MSL career passing and total offense records when the season ends.

But, Lussow warns, "I don't believe in throwing just for the sake of throwing. We want a running game, too."

The Viator team they'll see reminds Lions' coach Lyne of his 1969 Hales Franciscan club which didn't lose until Catholic League semi-finals in Soldier Field against eventual champion Loyola Academy.

"We've always had good attitudes, but these kids are a little better than everybody else," Lyne claimed. "If they stay this fired up, we ought to be able to do many things well."

Lyne said play execution "couldn't possibly be stronger" at this stage and remarked, "Mistakes and penalties are the key factor. In terms of a game plan, we don't have one. We'll do the things we do best."

Which puts the offense in the hands of QB Jim Thompson, tailback Jack Gracheck, fullback Bill Deal and halfback Mark Bonucchi. Only Gracheck played extensively last year.

Lussow and Lyne each forecast stiff defense. Forest View yielded 133 points in eight games last year and Viator 90 points in 11 games.

Does rah-rah technique work?

As a psychologist playing on the emotions of his football players, Knute Rockne of Notre Dame had few rivals.

Beneath the realism and pragmatism that were part of Rockne, below that dynamo that threatened to explode, lay a wide plinth of romanticism

Rockne usually kept his powerful emotions under firm control, but when Notre Dame was involved, he sometimes found himself overcome.

The Rockne "Win one for the Gipper" halftime speeches are legendary, and it's interesting how coaches look at these pep talks today.

How do you motivate today's athlete? What lies ahead for some players as the fall winds begin to blow the leaves off trees and footballs off tees? Is the Rockne method completely out of date?

Tubby Raymond, successful coach at Delaware, stresses that he treats his players as "grown men. I appeal to their intelligence. We don't go in for stuff like the Rice coach who once in a pre-game talk broke a leg off a table, smashed the blackboard with it, and then this was the signal for a series of firecrackers to go off in the shower room."

Will Gobrecht, coach of Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pa., said that "we don't believe in the old Knute Rockne theory. They must do the work on the field.

"Once, I was the rantin' type, but one day I was dressing the team down, calling 'em chumps, and stuff like that, and one of my players said to me aside, 'Coach, that's not the proper way to do things.' And I saw he was right, that the team was depressed instead of uplifted. So I changed."

"We leave most of the motivating to the players," said John Bushofsky of Austin Peay in Tennessee. "A few years ago the whole thing involved in coaching was how long a player's sideburns should be and whether we ought to permit him a mustache.

"Now we know all that is ridiculous, and hair has nothing to do with his performance or ours. I've learned that you can only breathe so much fire into a kid. A winner will almost always find a way to win, a loser will always find the best way to screw up.

"I tell a player that if he gives 100 per cent, then he'll never have any trouble looking at himself in the mirror. As for getting ready for a game, I let 'em laugh or frown or do anything they want. Each guy is different inside.

Knute Rockne

"There is one thing I do, though," the coach continued. "Before a game I show them a picture and read the accompanying poem about a four-year-old who walks in braces. He'd give anything to have good legs like my players do. I tell them they have an opportunity to take advantage of their good fortune."

Some coaches still believe in the rah-rah technique and like to tell the story of the device used by Biggie Munn when he was coach of Michigan State. Munn had someone hold a torch to 'light the way' for the team onto the field. But the lighter fluid spilled all over once and when he lit the torch the locker room nearly burned down.

"We prepare our players mentally by allowing our coaches and captains to give a pep talk just prior to the game," said Haywood Scissum of Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. "It puts the team as high as a kite.

"People talk about the new 'sophisticated' athlete but don't let anyone fool you. We get them from New York and Chicago and everywhere else to school down here in Alabama, and the pep talks work with these fellows."

Paul Wallrof of Puget Sound in Tacoma, Wash., agrees. "We play logging records with songs telling of the hard work, hardships and good times of being a logger in the great North Woods. It's been amazing how these 'cool' modern-day players have reacted. At first they thought it was bush and corny and reacted with laughter and disdain. Now they react with pride and enthusiasm."

As for the halftime "fire-up" speeches, the best comment I heard came from Delaware's Raymond.

"We don't have time for that kind of stuff," Raymond said, "because first, we have to go over the technical aspects at halftime. And second, we have 85 players in the locker room with only two urinals."

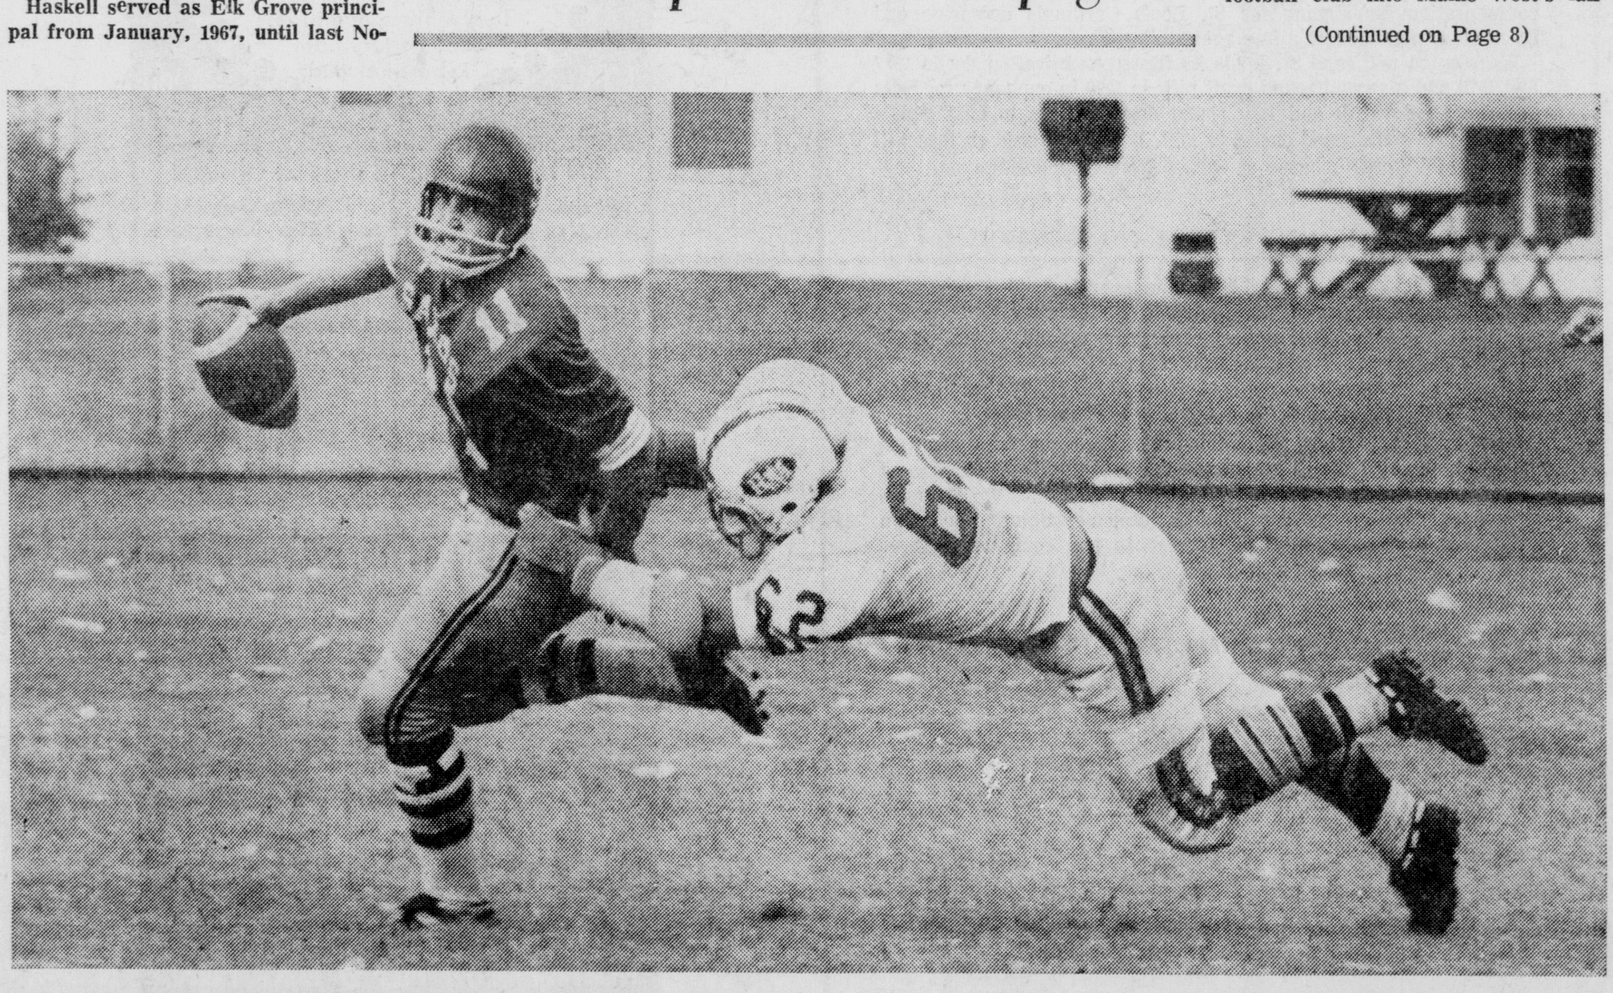

Frisk joins Houghton for first WWMM game

Herald Sports Editor Bob Frisk returns to his fourth season Friday night as color man for the WWMM-FM high school football broadcasts.

Frisk will join new WM play-by-play man Bob Houghton for the kickoff broadcast on 92.7 FM at 8 p.m.

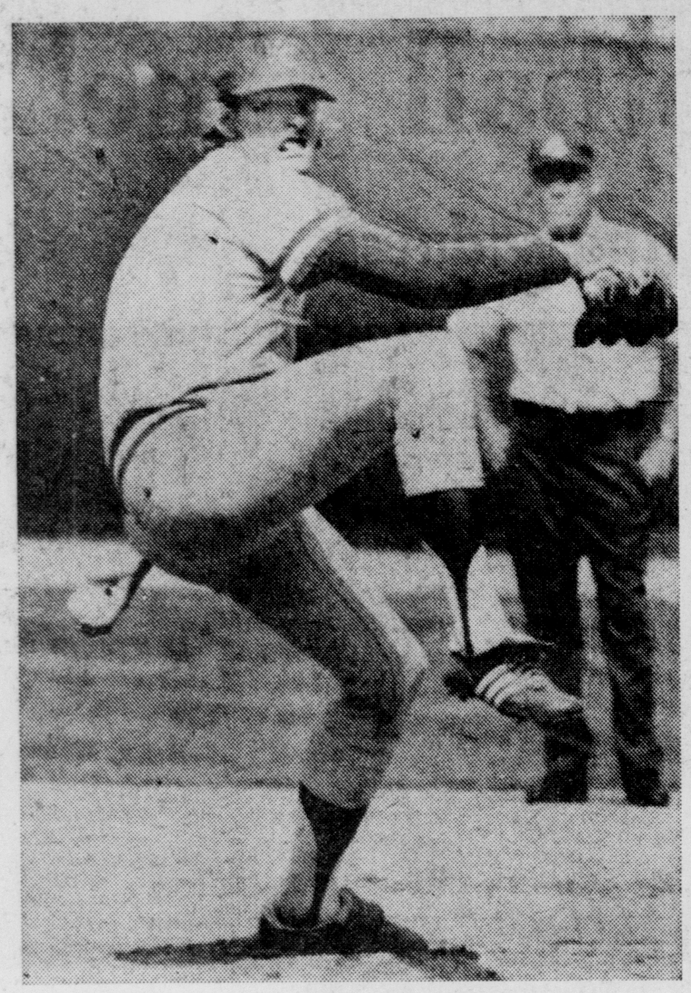

WM will initiate its 1975 high school football coverage with St. Viator and Forest View at the Forest View field. The station plans another ambitious schedule of Friday evening broadcasts in football and basketball and will make "Game of the Week" selections as team strengths develop.

The Forest View-St. Viator game also will be aired over WFVH-FM, 88.3, the Forest View High School station. Air time is 7:45 p.m.

MID-SUBURBAN DEFENSES can look forward to another year of chasing Schaumburg quarterback Russ Zonca (left) around the field. Zonca and his Saxon teammates ran their way to an MSL title in 1974 with a formidable wishbone option offense. The defending champs open the new season tonight at 8:00 at Fremd High School with Zonca at the QB controls.

FORMER Arlington High School star Paul Splittorff rares back to fire against the Chicago White Sox. The Kansas City ace flamed the ChiSox 7-0 as the Chicago pitchers walked 15 batters.

Borg and Jimmy advance to semis

Defending champion Jimmy Connors, ripping off winners from deep in the backcourt, defeated unseeded Andrew Pattison Thursday to enter the semifinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships but his pal, Ilie Nastase, fell victim to another disputed line call and was eliminated by Manuel Orantes.

Connors, who celebrated his 23rd birthday two nights ago when he last played singles, scored a routine 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 victory over Pattison while Nastase, the temperamental 1972 winner from Romania, lost heartstopper, 6-2, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

Bjorn Borg, after two hours and 55 minutes of cat-and-mouse tennis on the clay court of the stadium, wore down Eddie Dibbs and captured their match by winning a fourth-set tie-breaker, seven points to one, to gain the semifinals of the U. S. Open tennis championships today after Guillermo Vilas had advanced by trouncing Jaime Fillol.

Borg defeated Dibbs, 6-4, 7-6, 4-6, 7-6, while Vilas had a relatively easy time in ousting Fillol, 6-4, 6-0, 6-1.

Dibbs seemed to be suffering either pain or injury to his right thigh during the fourth and decisive set.

In Saturday's semifinals Connors meets the 19-year-old Borg.

Left-handed Guillermo Vilas, displaying the form which won him the Grand Prix Masters title last year, smashed Chile's Jaime Fillol, 6-4, 6-0, 6-1, today to gain the semifinals of the U. S. Open Tennis Championships.

Vilas, 23, the No. 2 seed, took total command of the Chilean by winning 12 straight games from 5-4 in the first set to 4-0 in the third. He had been broken by Fillol in the fifth game of the opening set but promptly broke back at love.

Bears get Vactor

The Washington Redskins traded reserve cornerback Ted Vactor to the Chicago Bears Thursday to climax a flurry of dealing to bring the team near the NFL player limit.

Vactor, a 6-foot, 185 pound, seven-year veteran from Nebraska, was traded to Chicago in exchange for a 1976 medium draft pick, the club announced. Vactor missed the entire 1974 season due to injuries.

In other moves, Washington sent the Los Angeles Rams four future draft picks in exchange for two future picks and offensive tackle Tim Stokes, a 6-foot-5 252-pound second year man.

The trades technically left Washington with a squad of 50 players, one over the limit. But the club has yet to announce the name of one more player, placed on waivers earlier this week.

The Redskins have been hurting for an offensive tackle since they determined that regular tackle Terry Hermeling would not be able to play until mid-October. In his place, Washington will select a starter from among veteran Ray Schoenke, WFL product Glen Hyde, and Stokes.

In an earlier move Thursday, the Redskins settled the question of compensation for signing for St. Louis Cardinals defensive end Dave Butz, who became a free agent this year.

Washington will send St. Louis its first round draft picks in 1977 and 1978 and a second round draft pick in 1979 in exchange for Butz and the Cards' fifth and 15th round draft choices in next year's draft and its sixth-round choice in 1977. But all of those choices will revert to St. Louis because of earlier trades by Washington.

Robinson retires as player

Frank Robinson, the first black man ever to hold a managing position in the major leagues, announced Thursday that he will return to the Cleveland Indians next year without playing, thus ending a 20-year major league career . . .

Robinson has been bothered by a torn tendon much of the season and has played only sparingly . . .

Houston Rockets guard Mike Newlin has been sued for more than $100,000 by a Salt Lake City man who claims he suffered permanent injury in a beating by the NBA All-Star player . . . Vic Deavano alleges that Newlin attacked him without provocation and beat him so severly that he cracked one vertebrae and compressed three others . . .

Pardee remembers the Dolphins

Shuffled Bears face tough Miami

Jack Pardee has seen the Miami Dolphins up close before. So have the Chicago Bears.

But when the Bears visit Miami to meet Don Shula's Dolphins at 7 p.m. CST, Saturday, for their fifth pre-season game, you can bet all those past links will go by the board.

It was January, 1973, in Los Angeles when linebacker Pardee and his Washington Redskin teammates tried, unsuccessfully, to wrestle the Super Bowl title from the Dolphins (14-7). It was the finale of a 15-year playing career for the former All-Pro.

Since then, Pardee — the NFL's youngest coach at 38 — spent a year as Washington's linebacking coach and led the unpaid, now defunct, Florida Blazers to finals in last summer's WFL playoffs.

Last season, the Dolphins met the Bears for the fourth time, crushed them, 30-7, in Chicago, and may have signaled the beginning of the Pardee era.

Since then, general manager Jim Finks and Pardee have shuffled coaches, front office and players, attempting to return the Monsters of the Midway to their once lofty perch.

Their most recent decisions, on Wednesday, involved sending second year defensive tackle Dave Gallagher to the New York Giants for wide receiver Bob Grim plus an undisclosed draft choice.

That leaves Pardee with two well-experienced receivers who've joined the Bears in recent days. They picked up Ron Shanklin from Pittsburgh before last weekend's 13-0 home debut loss to Denver.

Grim and Shanklin have 14 NFL seasons between them and each has been an All-Pro receiver, Grim with the Minnesota Vikings and Shanklin at Pittsburgh.

While obtaining Grim, Pardee also disposed of placekicker Mirro Roder, free safety Garry Lyle, guards Ernie Janet and Rick Anthony and wide receiver Wayne Wheeler, thus further severing ties with the Abe Gibron Regime.

Miami fans filing into the Orange Bowl and Chicagoans following on television (Channel 2, 7 p.m.) will surely need a program, especially when the Bears go on offense.

In rain-soaked Soldier Field last weekend, the Bears started just four 1974 offensive returnees — left tackle Lionel Antoine, quarterback Bobby Douglass, running back Clifton Taylor and wide receiver Charley Wade.

With the acquisitions of Shanklin and now Grim, either Wade or Bo Rather figures to lose his job.

The other seven (which included now departed Anthony) were new guys in town and arrived in the Bear camp via different paths.

Two are established NFL players Finks pried loose in trades — receiver Shanklin from the Steelers and guard Mark Nordquist from the Eagles.

Three who have stuck played in the WFL last season — center Dan Peiffer, tackle Jeff Sevy and tight end Greg Latta. (As did casualty Anthony.)

Running back Roland Harper came as a 17th round draft choice, from Louisiana Tech, and has gained 121 yards, three less than team leader Clifton Taylor.

Latta paces the Chicago receiving corps with 10 graps for 132 yards during a 2-2 exhibition season. While those statistics may not be overly impressive, they do surpass the 14-game figures for any of the Bears' three tight ends last season.

Saturday should mark the debut of running back Walter Payton, the Bears' top draft choice from Jackson State. Payton started for the College All-Stars against Pittsburgh.

but a recurring elbow injury has made the 5-foot-10½, 200-pounder virtually a shadow man ever since. Pardee promises to break Payton in slowly.

Others who've been bumped up but should be ready for the Dolphins are running backs Cid Edwards and Ken Grandberry, guards Noah Jackson and Bob Newton and defensive tackle Roger Stillwell.

Wide receiver George Farmer remains on the sidelines after his early training camp shoulder injury.

Seven-year pro Bobby Douglass again starts at quarterback as Gary Huff and rookie Bob Avellini will be along to watch his show.

With victories over San Diego and St. Louis offset by defeats to Green Bay and the Broncos, the Bears have still managed to yield only four touchdowns through their defense. A fifth enemy score came off an interception.

So Chicago should provide a stiff test for the always proud Dolphins who've not exactly overpowered Cincinnati (7-3), Detroit (20-14) and New Orleans (20-10) in three exhibitions.

Chicago has fared well in the Orange Bowl, defeating the Dolphins, 16-10, in 1969 and playing a 9-9 standoff in 1973. Both were pre-season games.

Miami won the only regular season game, 24-3 four seasons ago, and inflicted that 30-7 beating during a Soldier Field exhibition last year.

The Bears return to Soldier Field next Saturday evening to face the Houston Oilers at eight o'clock. It will begin a three-game home stand for Pardee's club.

Chicago opens the regular season with home dates against Baltimore (Sept. 21) and Philadlephia (Sept. 28) Their first Central Division affair will be Sunday, Oct. 5, at Minnesota.

BEAR TRACKS: Plenty of tickets remain available for all games on a single-game or season basis; inquire at the Bears' loop ticket office, 173 W. Madison. Brent Musburger, now with the CBS network sports group, plus former Bears' star receiver Johnny Morris, who replaced Musberger at Channel 2, will handle the telecast. The Bears will continue their regular season workouts in Lake Forest, reportedly because the new regime of Finks and Pardee does not place much favor in Soldier Field. Opponents have scored three touchdowns passing and Chicago just one, that thrown by Douglass.

Splittorff dazzles Chicago, 7-0

Kansas City walks past White Sox

CHICAGO (UPI) — Frank White and Jim Wohlford each drove in three runs Thursday to lead the Kansas City royals, who collected 15 walks, to their fourth straight victory and sixth in the last eight games with a 7-0 triumph over the Chicago White Sox on Paul Splittorff's third shutout of the season.

The bases on balls total was three short of the major league record of 18 set by Detroit against Philadelphia on May 9, 1916, and equalled by Cleveland against Boston on May 20, 1948.

Wohlford and White each delivered a bases loaded single to drive in two runs apiece in a four-run third inning which beat Ken Kravec, making his first major league appearance.

John Mayberry singled with one out and Kravec walked both Al Collins and Harmon Killebrew before Dan Osborn relieved. Wohlford singled for tfo runs and after Buck Martinez walked, White singled for another pair.

White doubled in the seventh to score Rod Scott and Wohlford singled to drive in Mayberry in a two-run eighth.

Splittorff, who prepped at Arlington High School, walked only one batter and struck out three in evening his season record at 8-8.

The victory left the Royals six games behind pace-setting Oakland in the American League West.

Kansas City acquired left-handed pitcher Ray Sadecki from the Atlanta Braves in a late move Thursday and sent the Braves a pair of minor-league pitchers in return.

Sadecki, 34, joins Kansas City as part of a deal for pitcher Bruce Dal Canton, who was death to the Braves June 30. In addition, the Royals sent Al Autry and Morm Angelini, both of whom pitched for Omaha this past season to Atlanta.

Sadecki, who has compiled a 132-130 record in 15 years in the major leagues, has posted a 3-3 mark and a 4.09 earned run average in 33 games this season for St. Louis and Atlanta. He previously pitched for the San Francisco Giants and the New York Mets.

Sadecki originally signed with St. Louis in 1958 and his best season was in 1964 when he was 20-11 and won a World Series game.

Leading stealers

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals and Bert Campaneris of the Oakland Athletics were the leading base-stealers most thefts for a career still active in 1975. Brock is the all-time National League champion.

Moss makes a move

Perry Moss, new head football coach of the WFL San Antonio team, was a quarterback on Illinois' 1946 Big Ten championship and 1947 Rose Bowl teams.

Baseball observer speaks out

Dear Sirs,

This baseball season is the best advertisement possible for a 130-game schedule. What a bore!

Once the Cubs folded their act after an early blush of success, the status quo took effect and the "races" amounted to watching how fast the leaders could race away from their nearest competitors.

The Los Angeles Dodgers have become a joke that even Johnny Carson wouldn't touch. The Phils, Mets and Cardinals are so used to finishing behind the Pirates they don't know how to go about catching them.

In the American League Boston and Oakland rule 10 other teams that couldn't beat the San Diego Padres regularly.

On the playoffs!

Despite its awesome features, the Cincinnati Reds will not get to the World Series. Their lead of nearly a score of games will mean nothing in the short series. They will also be lacking the precision that is honed in a tough race through the season.

Pittsburgh hasn't been in a tough race either but they've at least had to weather some periods of adversity which the Reds have avoided nicely.

Boston and Oakland will be exciting and close. The A's will win and go on to whip the Pirates in the World Series. Thus affirming the genius of Charlie O. Finley — for how else but through genius could the best team in baseball emerge regularly from the inferior league?

LOGAN OFF-BASE

Dear fans forum:

I was so infuriated with Paul Logan's parting shot in his column Thursday (Sept. 4) that I had to rush down to the Herald's office to personally hand-deliver this rebuttal letter. In a segment of his column Logan entitled "Let's see pros working for union scale," he makes a couple of statements which are thoroughly disagreeable — no matter how you look at them.

Logan suggests that it would be interesting to see the reaction of players if they had to work for union scale — say $30,000 for the average four-year player. He reports that running backs would start at $24,000 and "superstar" quarterbacks would earn their way up to $100,000.

Ed Garvey, director of the players association, is quoted as saying "I don't know what the players would do," if such a scale were employed. Logan says that he knows what the fans would do — they'd "enjoy the game more."

How or why, I ask? What possible satisfaction could fans get from knowing that the players are making less money? Especially if they were all being paid the same amount on a set scale. What ever happened to the old American tradition of getting as much money as you can? I thought everybody but communists subscribed to that philosophy.

Anyway, how does Logan know what the fans would do? Most fans couldn't be bothered with what a player earns. Since when is it anybody's business? I don't publish my salary.

If you don't like pro sports salaries, then don't watch pro sports.

A directory for buying a recreational vehicle

If one has extra money this year and wants to get away from it all in style, it could be tempting to buy a recreational vehicle RV.

"I'm going to buy a camper," one says to an RV-er friend.

"Great!" says he. "A pickup camper, fifth wheel, or motorhome."

"Er, a trailer."

"Tent-trailer, travel trailer, park model or high-low?"

For the befuddled, here's a directory of what was showing this summer at the Recreational Vehicle Show.

The easiest RV to pull with an ordinary car is a tent-trailer. It's a few appliances mounted in a low box so it takes little extra gas. At camp the lid becomes a roof and beds slide out on the ends with airy canvas walls. There are also models with full hard shells.

A high-low trailer pretends it's a tent-trailer on the road, but then the solid pillbox top rises to form a conventional trailer shape.

A travel trailer can be small enough for a station wagon or so huge it needs a pickup truck, but it's still narrow enough to fit on the road. Back in the '50s Lucille Ball's "Long, Long Trailer" was a 36-foot mobile home, but now 36 feet is just a travel trailer — and has a fancier bathroom.

For living on a site semi-permanently, there are even bigger "park model" trailers. Many have an extra sitting room that pulls out from the side.

If you have a pickup, you can top it with a simple cap to make a cave to live in. A pickup camper is a trailer that slides onto the bed. If you put a big unit on a small truck, you get a very topheavy road hazard.

But fifth wheels seemed to be the big pickup vehicle at the 1975 RV show. Fifth wheels ride on their own four wheels and attach to the pickup bed like a semi-trailer, leaving room for beds in the forward loft.

One older couple at the show said fifth wheels are being bought by "people like us" who want to follow the sun in comfort. They said getting into bed on your knees may be tough, but it's easier than crawling into the cab-over bunks on pickup campers. A fifth wheel also is a lot easier to detach than a pickup camper.

Then there are motorhomes in all sizes, from the air-conditioned monsters to the minis that look like trailers grafted onto the rear of a van. Even smaller are the van conversions, which may have a pop-up roof so one can stand up.

The floor plans are infinite and the number of firms in the industry is mind-boggling, so take some time to shop around and make sure the whole family — not Ed next door — likes it. An RV stops being "cozy" about 90 minutes into an all-day rainstorms if it doesn't fit your family like a wet bicycling jersey.

Hawks, Knights pass harrier tests

The Hoffman Estates cross country team successfully christened its new forest preserve course Thursday by taking a pair of wins from Wheaton North and interdivision rival Hersey in the season's first action for the three squads.

In other double duels, Prospect beat Schaumburg (21-34) and McHenry, and Rolling Meadows stopped Elk Grove (25-30) and Addison Trail (19-36) while Elk Grove also got by Addison (21-35). Wheeling beat St. Viator, 27-32.

The Hoffman Hawks got off on the right foot in their quest for a South Division title by nailing Hersey, 18-43, putting five harriers inside the Huskies' second man.

Dave Porzel blazed the new trail in 16:18 for the Hawks, followed three seconds later by teammate Sam Cox. Hoffman's three-mile course is near the corner of Barrington Road and Rte. 72.

Wheaton's Billy Johnson was third, followed by Rick Meyer of Hersey and three more Hoffman runners — Kevin Rooney, Ed Elliott, and Ken Krueger. Hersey's Craig Hanssen was eighth.

Hoffman defeated Wheaton, 18-45, and Hersey topped Wheaton, 21-37. Coach Larry Travis' Huskies demonstrated strength on the freshman level.

Hawk coach Jim Swift showed pleasure with the early-season success, particularly since a pair of his harriers were on the sidelines. Hoffman's first conference meet will be next Thursday against Schaumburg.

The Schaumburg Saxons, meanwhile, were losing to Prospect, as the Knights put Matt Lawson, soph Mark Smith, and Bill Hrbek in front of Schaumburg's first man, Randy Lewis.

McHenry's Bill Oakley took first in a record-setting time of 14:46 on Schaumburg's 2.85-mile Campanelli Park course.

In the only other conference dual, Rolling Meadows edged Elk Grove at Busse Woods as Mustang junior Tom Choice ran a tough race in 16:53 to take first place. Joe Cullen and John Fabbrini of Elk Grove ran second and third.

Wheeling got started with a victory over St. Viator with Wildcat Ben Sanchez running the three-mile course in 15:48. St. Viator's Steve Kastner ran second, followed by teammates Eskin and Hendricks. But Wheeling put four more harriers ahead of the Lions' fourth man.

Entry deadline nears for priests' golf outing

The Association of Chicago Priests will hold its first annual "Marty Howard Golf Outing" Thursday, Sept. 25, at St. Andrew's Country Club in West Chicago.

The outing, open to all the priests and deacons of the Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago, is in memory of the late Msgr. Martin Howard, who was pastor of St. Juliana's Church in Chicago at the time of his recent death. Msgr. Howard, one of the best known and most popular priests in the diocese, previously had served as rector of both Quigley North and Quigley South preparatory seminaries.

At the dinner following the day of golf, "Marty Howard Award" will be presented to the priest in the archdiocese who "best exemplifies a spirit of life in the priesthood." It will be the first of annual awards to be given at the ACP golf day.

Deadline for reservations is this Wednesday. The Rev. William Zavaski, associate pastor of St. James Church, Arlington Heights, and chairman of the event, is still looking for donors of prizes for the golf tournament.

For further information contact Rev. Zavaski, 253-6305, Rev. Don Hughes, 966-8145; or Rev. Jim Flynn, 378-6331.

Illini might be darkhorse of Big Ten grid season

CHAMPAIGN—Coach Bob Blackman has a middle of the road assessment of his 1975 Illinois football team.

"We don't think there's a team on our schedule that we can't beat," he said. "Likewise, we know there are 11 teams on our schedule that can beat us."

Last year the Illini were only humiliated by Ohio State. If Blackman is correct in his conjecture that his team will be better, Illinois could be a dark horse in a bid for a finish close to the top if not the championship, and perhaps could get a bid to some kind of bowl.

Jim Stauner

The bright spots could be the return to action of injured players who missed last season, running backs Lonnie Perrin and Steve Green, and linebacker Scott Studwell.

"Perrin is running with no hurt or pain," Blackman said. "He's showing moves that scare everyone every day. Green is just as healthy, but we're bringing him along slowly. He's a very important player and we want to take every precaution. Studwell and John Sullivan should be two of the most awesome interior linebackers in the league."

Return of Perrin, a speedster runner and excellent placekicker who booms kickoffs into the end zone more frequently than not, could be a big plus. He probably will alternate with Chubby Phillips at tailback, and he might get into action on accasion as a flanker, because of his running ability and sure hands.

"Both Phillips and Perrin will be playing a lot," Blackman said. "They both realize they'll be in there and we feel they complement each other very well."

Quarterback might be a problem, but Blackman welcomed the competition between Jim Kopatz and Kurt Steger.

"We have the type of competition between them that is going to improve both of them as well as our offense," Blackman said. "Both are performing with minimal mistakes and both are throwing with great sharpness. Right now Kopatz is No. 1 but Steger is showing steady improvement."

John DiFeliciantonio and Dean March should be the key to the defense, and Blackman said "both of them are showing the consistency of performance that really wins games for you. Their efforts are contagious too, and they're helping us in some trouble spots, helping other players to mature a bit faster."

Bruce Beaman returns to anchor the defensive backfield and Bill Cerney and Jim Stauner probably will take up positions with him. Both have some experience but won no letters.

Blackman expected a better performance from his offensive line, marking guard Stu Levenick and Doug Kleber as mainstays. But he has other lettermen for many spots, and a Big Blus in place kicker Dan Beaver for field goal tries.

Overall, too, he believed depth would be improved and help the team "In past years, we had a lot of question marks," he said. "This year we're two or three deep in big offensive linemen who can get the job done. This will be my first year at Illinois where depth won't be a problem on the offensive unit."

The Illini might get a view of the overall outlook quickly, playing Iowa, one of the four teams to win over Illinois last year, in the opener. But the real tests will come later when the schedule calls for Purdue, Michigan State, Wisconsin, Ohio State and Michigan in order. Those five weeks ought to decide the bowl prospects.

'More vigorous' hockey attracts girls

by ART BUSHNELL

WEST SENECA, N.Y. (UPI) — After breaking the sex barriers in Little League baseball and soap box derby racing, girls are turning to a more physical sport — ice hockey — says director of the nation's only girl's hockey school.

"I think a lot of the girls feel they have a need for a more vigorous sport," says Russell DiBartolo, office coordinator of the Buffalo Sabres Summer Hockey School. "When they play hockey, they find they like it a lot."

Fifty girls between the ages of 8 and 18 attended the one-week school in August. DiBartolo says one teenage girl came 1,000 miles to attend the classes.

Last year 30 girls attended. The school had to turn away applicants this year because "we just didn't have space for more than 50 girls," says DiBartolo.

The girls spend seven hours a day in classrooms and on the ice learning the same techniques boys learn in another part of the school.

"First we work on skating fundamentals, then we move to stick handling and passing the puck, then to team play. The program ends with a regulation game," DiBartolo says.

"There's nothing different in teaching the girls from the boys," says Peter McNab, a Sabres player and one of the instructors at the school. "You try to teach them the same fundamentals.

"These girls are good learners. They've been shut out from these things for so long, they don't waste any time. They're here because of their interest in hockey."

DiBartolo says so many girls are playing hockey now that the Buffalo Metropolitan area should have enough girl hockey players this season to have recreational leagues for several age groups. Last year, all age groups played in one eight-team league.

"Basically, they play the same game as boys," he says. "But there's much less fighting. A lot of fighting with the boys has to do with spectator expectations that they're going to fight. These expectations are not there for the girls, so they take a more rational approach.

"It appears the girls try to finesse more, while the boys try to barge on through."

Some girls are already playing in boys' leagues, he says, adding that a woman might someday play professional hockey with men.

"It's just a matter of training and socialization," he says. "As far as strength and agility are concerned there's no reason girls can't train for that and play with boys. I don't see any problem with their taking the lumps. We all wear equipment."

DiBartolo says that goaltender would be the best position for a woman to break into professional hockey.

"There's not much contact there and attitudinal problems wouldn't be the same as on a line," he says.

Gerry Meehan, of the NHL Atlanta Flames, director of the school, disagrees with DiBartolo, saying "at this point I think physical aspects make the pro level more than a woman could put up with. If a woman wanted to develop herself to the same point where she was as physically strong as a man, then it might be possible. But that's highly unlikely."

However, Meehan agrees that female interest is growing in hockey as a participant sport rather than a game to be watched from the stands.

Harper harriers in debut

The Harper cross country team opens its season this afternoon in Chicago with a triangular meet against host Wright and Oakton and coach Bob Nolan's squad has already felt the pinch of junior college athletics.

Harper's No. 1 harrier, Mark Kimmet, has packed up and gone off to Northern Illinois University to continue his studies. Kimmet, who qualified for the nationals in 1974, would have given the Hawks a solid base in their new North Central Community College Conference.

As it is, Nolan still figures that his boys can run with the powerhouses of the league — DuPage, Wright, and a couple of others.

Leading the Hawks will be returning harriers Rick Reithal, Dave Adler, Keith Jauch, Dennis Fagan, and newcomer John Messinger. Nolan also hopes to get ex-Schaumburg runners Mike Palmer and Mike Hommowun.

But considering the nature of junior college life — class loads, work schedules, and the like — Nolan takes what he can get and he's happy with it. He doesn't have any scholarships to give away. If a potential runner finds time to give to Nolan, the coach takes it gratefully.

The Hawks inaugurate their home season Sept. 15 against Illinois Valley. Harper once again will call Palatine Hills their home course.

Well kept secret

Shock arose in Hawaii when it was established that the 12-year-old baseball star Casey was actually a girl. She had led the Police Club of Honolulu to the championship of the 400-team conference in 1962.

TALENTED AND FAST tailback Scott Unger, a Maine West senior, will lead the Warriors in their 8:00 home opener tonight with Prospect.

Arlington grads take tennis posts

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Tennis Editor

A pair of Arlington High School graduates have taken the head tennis coaching positions at Hersey and Rolling Meadows and will begin chasing their alma mater in the Mid-Suburban League this spring.

Bill von Boeckmann, Arlington '68, has assumed the tennis destiny of Rolling Meadows, replacing Neil Peterson. Bruce Starek, Arlington '71, will be in charge of the Hersey program, a post vacated by Lother Peistrup.

Both coaches expressed satisfaction with the programs left them by their predecessors.

"Right now I plan to stick to the program that Mr. Peterson has started," said von Boeckmann. "As I see changes that have to be made I'll make them but right now I just want to get my feet on the ground."

Von Boeckmann, along with his older brother Bob, were two of the most dominant players in Arlington's long procession of dominating players.

Bruce Starek

Bill Von Bueckmann

"Arlington has had a hold on this conference for as long as I can remember," he said. "And that was fine when I was playing there. But now I'm going to be working to put Meadows up there on top sometime in the future."

Von Boeckmann attended Harper and Georgia Southern, later taking the head coaching job and posting a 10-9 record in 1972-73.

He teaches physical education part time at Meadows and is a pro at the Arlington Indoor Tennis Club.

Starek is looking forward to the prospect of knocking off his old school.

"I'd challenge Mr. (Arlington head tennis coach Tom) Pitchford any day," Starek said. "He'd want me to.

"It will take a lot of time but I'm just going to follow what Mr. Peistrup has done. I'm new to this and lucky to have taken over a sound program."

Starek is a graduate of Valparaiso and will teach biology at Hersey.

Officials needed for girls sports

There's an urgent need for athletic officials, particularly women, in the rapidly expanding Illinois High School Association (IHSA) girls athletic activities program.

We are in the middle year of our three-year plan for expansion in our girls interscholastic athletic program," said Harry Fitzhugh, executive secretary of the IHSA. "We presently register officials for the girls sports of volleyball, softball, field hockey, track and field, swimming, basketball and gymnastics. In some areas of the state, the need for trained officials is critical."

Persons interested in becoming registered with the IHSA as an official should write to: Girls Athletic Officials Dept., IHSA Office, 2715 McGraw Dr., Bloomington, Ill. 61701. Applicants must be graduated from an accredited high school or be at least 20 years of age.

Upon receipt by the IHSA office, applicants will be sent an informational letter, registration membership form and application form. All applications must be made on IHSA forms. Applicants must pay a registration fee of $10 and $1 for each additional sport they wish to work.

—Pat Teefey, a 6-2, 215-pound senior from Hersey High School, has been selected by his teammates at Indiana State University as the defensive captain for the 1975 football season.

Teefey, who recently married his high school sweetheart Chris, earned the defensive "Hatchet Award" last season by knocking down 16 runners on his own, helping out with 28 other tackles, threw nine ball carriers for losses and recovered a fumble.

Bob Radzis of Elk Grove is also on the ISU football team for 1975.

—Illinois State has added a galloping fullback to their 1975 football squad in the person of Fremd graduate Rich Sharpe, who will be starting his freshman year for the Cardinals. Dave Rumzis of Maine West is also on the team.

—Bill Schumann will be starting his senior season on the Indiana State cross country team this fall. He is a graduate of Wheeling High School.

—Rich Novak of Mount Prospect and Mark Michuda, a graduate of St. Viator, are both fighting for the right defensive end job with the Southern Illinois University football team this fall.

—The Ripon Redmen will be counting on a pair of area gridders when they open the 1975 season against Knox College. Scott Narup of Arlington Heights is a sophomore split end for the Wisconsin school while Tom Houchins of Mount Prospect is a junior defensive end.

Hawks look for skaters

The Hoffman Hawks High School hockey club is now organizing for its third hockey season. The team will be made up of only those players who attend Hoffman Estates High School.

If there is enough interest in the try outs they may be able to suit both a varsity and junior varsity team.

The JV team will skate their regular league games at the Hat Trick Ice Arena, located at Rte. 83 and North Ave. The varsity team will play their league games in the Polar Dome Ice Arena, located at Rte. 72 and Rte. 25.

The first tryout session will be held at the Polar Dome on Sunday, Sept. 14 at 5:30 p.m. All boys who are interested should report to the ice arena at least one-half hour before tryouts begin.

The fee for the tryouts will be $20 and all registration and fees must be taken care of by Sept. 7. For more information contact 885-4246.

Madlock to visit bank

Bill Madlock, star of the Chicago Cubs and the leading hitter in the National League, will make a guest appearance in the lobby of North West Federal Savings, 4901 W. Irving Park Road on Friday, Sept. 12 from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Madlock will answer questions and sign autographs.

Dug Out holds final meet

Dug Out Park is searching for entries to fill out the field for their final tournament of the year. The second annual bi-State 12-inch slow pitch tournament will be held Sept. 13-14. In the first round teams from Illinois will battle clubs from Wisconsin in the single elimination, open invitational tournament.

The entry fee will be $40, which includes sponsor trophies for the champion and runner-up teams. Traveling expenses for the first and second-place teams will also be a part of the purse.

For more information contact Tom Furlan at 414-862-9136 or mail entry to Doug Out Park, Rt. 1 Box 321, Trevor, Wisconsin 53179.

Area gridders on Lions

The Chicagoland Football League Lions will open a 10-game schedule Sunday, Sept. 7 with the Clearing Brewers in Luther North Stadium at 5700 Berteau in Chicago.

Kickoff will be 1:30 p.m.

Four players from the area will be suited up for the Lions' opener. They are receiver John Rivelli of Buffalo Grove, his brother Larry, a running back from Arlington Heights, linebacker Bob Savage of Rolling Meadows and defensive back Owen Porter of Elk Grove.

Coach clinic approaching

On Saturday, Sept. 13, the Park District of Park Ridge will sponsor a youth hockey coach's clinic open to all Illinois coaches, managers and interested parents. The one day intensive clinic will be conducted by Charles "Lefty" Smith, the head hockey coach at the University of Notre Dame.

The clinic will be held at the Oakton Ice Arena, 2800 W. Oakton in Park Ridge between 9:15 a.m. and 7:15 p.m. Registration can be made in person or by mail. For further information contact 692-3358.

Preps kick off 1975 grid schedule

where the Warriors of Jim Morel seek a rapid maturity of their own.

The Knights had the great season last year, 6-2 behind new coach Keefe. He wasn't surprised and now looks for greater success.

"Halfway through last season, we'd played a lot of juniors who were quality football players," said Keefe. "They developed very quickly and worked extra hard since last football season."

Keefe warned, however, "You don't know how they'll react under pressure. That's why we're so anxious to play. We're very hopeful, but you don't accomplish anything until you've proven it on the field."

The Prospect coach indicated his Knights must contain Maine quarterback Bob Zuccarini on rollout sweeps and option passes.

Three fine running backs will display their stuff at Maine. Prospect has the biggest, 6-foot-2, 212-pounder Meyer and 5-10, 200-pounder Keith Mason. Maine has the fastest, 5-10, 168-pound Unger, a real blue dart.

It's a great big game for the Warriors who won three-of-four closing a 3-6 season last year. West coach Morel emphasized, "a willingness to put it on the line. The kids really want to go out and win a game."

Elsewhere . . . look for lots of Oklahoma against some Westmar College in the Schaumburg-Fremd encounter.

Ferguson of the Saxons has gone strictly to Oklahoma option football. But new coach Samojedny at Fremd will probably stick to a Westmar College attack, the same principle he and Ferguson learned while playing together at Westmar.

Says Ferguson of the Westmar style, "It's three yards and a cloud of dust."

Samojedny beat Ferguson, 12-6, in a junior-varsity game a few years back. They were also opposing assistants at the varsity level.

This time around, the Oklahoma attack figures to prevail over Westmar College.

Schaumburg has a great senior quarterback in Zonca and Ferguson says 28 to 30 points per game ought to be about right. Junior fullback Mike Christy will not play.

It's the first test for Wheeling's Clinnin who's building a new program. Or trying, anyhow. "We've laid all the groundwork for a new era in Wheeling football," said Clinnin. "Now we need to get our feet wet. The kids are anxious to play."

They'll face a Rolling Meadows team which has more questions than answers as Angelo Barro, who's had many fine teams, must hope speed will overcome the presence of so many fresh faces.

Buffalo Grove coach Grant Blaney expressed mild disappointment at Monday's intrasquad, said the Bison improved during the week and hopes they're ready to catch some Conant Cougars.

New coach Ayres of Conant gets his first chance to test an Ayres' theory: Football should be work for the staff and fun for the kids.

All festivities begin at approximately eight o'clock.

Schaumburg Kings plan registration

Hockey registration for the Schaumburg Kings midget and junior programs will be held this Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Polar Dome in Dundee.

All interested boys should register at the above time for tryouts. The tryouts will be held next week.

Additional information can be obtained by calling Joe Benedetto (885-8898), Vince Russo (894-7595) or Regg Jones (894-2918).
